NFO Recess Brings Price Dip

CORNING, Iowa (AP) — Hog prices skidded sharply today as members of the National Farmers Organization prepared to sell livestock they had kept off the market for 32 days in a holding action which was recessed Tuesday night.

Local Firm Lists Increase In Receipts

Officials at the Bowling Stockyard reported today that livestock receipts were up today at their auction, due in part to the recess in the National Farmers' Organization holding action.

Prices for hogs paid there were 50 cents a hundred lower than yesterday, as the effect of the recess was felt here. Heavy hogs were especially penalized.

J. N. Robinson of Missouri and William Davis, Monroe Township farmer, acting as spokesmen for the Pickaway County unit of the NFO, announced today that local members were moving some livestock following the announcement of the recess yesterday by Oren Lee Staley, national president.

They emphasized that the recess applied only to meat and not to other agricultural commodities being withheld from the market.

DAVIS noted that the recess would permit the local group to concentrate on organizational activities in the county.

He announced that the county bargaining committee will be elected at the next meeting, scheduled for October 9 in the 4-H and Grange Building at the Fairgrounds.

The committee is composed of 15 persons, five representing grain farmers, five from dairy farmers, and five from meat raisers. The duties of the local committee will be to determine the costs of production in the county and the price the producer needs for products he markets.

No Martial Law Declared by U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Searches and seizures by federal officers in Mississippi are carried out under President Kennedy's proclamation directing them to maintain law and order, says a Justice Department spokesman.

There has been no declaration of martial law, according to Jack Rosenthal, assistant information officer. "The people down there"—U.S. marshals and Army troops—"are carrying out an order to maintain law and order," he said. "If they are making searches, they can do so if they have suspicion of a crime, such as assaulting or interfering with federal officers."

School Enrollment Outlined During City Board Meeting

Highlighting a lengthy session of the Circleville Board of Education last night at the high school was a detailed presentation of student enrollment by Superintendent Fritz Jacobs.

As of Monday, enrollment in city schools hit a new high of 3,075 students. Jacob's breakdown showed: Atwater, 415; Corwin, 165; Court, 432; Franklin-Mound, 401; High Street, 165; Walnut, 198; Wayne, 94; Nicholas Drive 244; eighth grade, 235; and the high school, 726.

Jacobs pointed out that all buildings (and rooms) are currently near capacity. The high school building, which also houses the eighth grade, has a total of 972 students.

In his outline, he noted that the high school building will have to accommodate at least 100 new students next year if enrollment remains stable. His figures were based on a graduating class of 126 this year and a total of 972 seventh graders that will flood eighth grade classrooms next fall.

NO immediate solution was offered for the increasing need of classrooms, although board members participated in a lengthy discussion of the situation on an immediate planning basis.

The superintendent presented a general report of needs and repairs of the high school building.

Water Level Drilling Starts South of City

Drilling to determine water levels was started this week on the tract of land south of Circleville, owned by the Miller Development Co., a subsidiary of South-Central Rural Electric.

A crane outfit was moved into the area by the local D. E. Goodchild Construction Co. There was no indication today as to how long the drilling activity will continue.

The Miller land, purchased in July from the Crites Milling Co., has been designated as a huge housing development area. According to spokesmen today, the water level testing is one of the first steps in initiating the project.

Early announcements indicated an overall program for 600 new homes in the area east of Route 23. Approximately 100 acres have been purchased on the west side of the highway for a contemplated shopping center-commercial project.

According to announcements, the commercial project is headed by the Wacker Realty Co. of Lancaster.

Secretary, 41, Denied Hearing For Parole

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Pardon and Parole Commission has postponed for another five years parole consideration for a former Cleveland secretary convicted of embezzlement.

Miss Mildred Charvat, 41, still refuses to identify the man to whom, she says, she gave more than $95,000 in stolen union funds and $15,000 of her own money.

During her trial in May 1955, she pleaded guilty to 22 counts of forgery in connection with embezzlements from funds of the Cleveland Industrial Union Council. She received 11 consecutive and 11 concurrent sentences which could run up to 230 years.

The Commission reported that her steadfast refusal to stay where the money went was not the only reason for the postponement. However, there was no elaboration.

At the time of her arrest, Miss Charvat said she had given the money to a man "who needed it for a worthy cause, including the saving of a life."

The matter was tabled for further study. Jacobs added that more reports would follow on current and future needs of other buildings within the school system.

Upon the superintendent's recommendation the board adopted this policy regarding pupil absence:

Legal, or excused absences, will include personal illness; critical illness within the family; quarantine; death of a relative; observance of religious holidays;

Fire, Police Issues Aired by Council

Efforts to find solutions to two problems now confronting the Circleville Fire and Police Departments consumed a major share of time during last night's Council session.

Initial debate was focused on the fire department, now without an emergency ambulance. Later talk moved to the police department and the problem of being forced to carry special patrolmen on the roster instead of allegedly required regulars.

The fire department has been without an emergency ambulance for the last couple of weeks due to the worn condition of the present vehicle. However, a suggested remedy brought to the Council's attention will come under further study.

According to Council's Safety Committee, local auto agency head Ned Harden has offered the city a Chevrolet vehicle which can be devoted to ambulance service. The solons were told the donation would cost the city $1 per year for leasing, plus regular maintenance and insurance.

SOLICITOR Kenneth Robbins questioned legal aspects of the move, then suggested the committee meet with Harden after he was told there apparently are no barriers attached.

Harden had furnished the city an ambulatory vehicle prior to the obtaining of the old ambulance which has now been forced into retirement.

The next step probably will be a meeting between Harden, Fire Chief Talmer Wise and members of the safety committee — then final action by the Council. Chief Wise last night asked for an early decision or opinion to expedite the matter.

The special police situation—the city now has three — was hashed and reshaped, with Chief Robert Temple, Mayor Richard Penn and most of the Council members taking part.

Chief Temple, emphasizing that he is not in favor of hiring special officers, said at present the safety director has no other alternative. He indicated he stands ready to follow advice by Solicitor Robbins and Council.

Mayor Penn termed the hiring of specials as being necessary to maintain the department at authorized strength. He said he has seen no indication of abuse in the procedure which has been in use here for many years.

Temple's main objection was directed to the fact that special officers are not required to contribute to the police retirement pension fund. He said he does not know the answer to the problem.

Bribery Conviction Review Is Refused

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Supreme Court today refused to review the bribery convictions of two men in the 1960 Dover gambling scandal.

Joseph Adelman and Fred G. Bergquist appealed from their convictions in lower courts of Tuscarawas County on charges of conspiring with others to bribe former Mayor Clifford C. Forelich of Dover to open the city to gambling.

Forelich was acquitted although he admitted accepting $1,500 from George Markos, Dover gambler, for charitable purposes. Markos was sentenced to 2-20 years in prison for bribing the mayor. The U.S. Supreme Court turned down Markos' appeal last year.

lem, but is forced to be content with the present setup.

Councilman Robert Smith suggested that a municipal civil service examination be arranged as an attempt to establish a police eligible list. Mayor Penn concurred, noting that steps will be taken to setup the test.

The city's special officers are Charles Tomlinson, Dixie Watters and Jack Mills. Council hastened to point out and emphasize that no complaints have been lodged against these patrolmen.

Anti-Castro Bloc Forming

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States was reported making progress today in its campaign to raise a solid front of Latin American opposition to the Castro regime in Cuba.

Foreign ministers attending a 20-nation inter-American conference at the State Department were said to be developing agreement that further steps must be taken to bottle up the Soviet-backed Communist threat in its Cuban base.

The conference, which opened Tuesday, is scheduled to end late today, probably with a final communiqué. Steps to tighten the economic and political squeeze on Prime Minister Fidel Castro's regime may follow.

These could include further clamping down on trade with Cuba and imposition of stricter controls over travel, propaganda and money flow from Cuba to Central and South America.

President Kennedy was reported to have told a luncheon meeting of the foreign ministers Tuesday that the Communist threat posed by developments in Cuba is the responsibility not just of the United States alone but of all the American nations. Backing up an earlier conference speech by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Kennedy reportedly called for solid support for both defensive and offensive strategies.

Members of Congress who attended the luncheon said the President's remarks constituted an eloquent appeal for support of anti-Castro measures throughout the Western Hemisphere. Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., said that the President "really laid it on the line."

Americans attending the luncheon said views expressed by visiting foreign ministers in private conversation indicated that a considerable degree of unity was developing on the Cuban problem.

Grid Tickets Due At Herald Office

An expected overflow crowd for Circleville's Football game at Washington C. H. Friday has prompted WCH Boosters to arrange a reserved seat ticket sale here tomorrow.

The tickets will be available at The Herald office, N. Court St., from 4 until 8 p. m. Heading the Washington ticket delegation will be Max Lawrence and Paul Pennington.

Student tickets for the traditional rivalry battle will be available starting today in all Circleville elementary schools.

Area Chamber Embraces Levy For Hospital

Affirmative Action Taken; Aid Offered By Unit Members

A full endorsement was given to the proposed Berger Hospital expansion and improvement levy yesterday by the Circleville Area Chamber of Commerce.

The endorsement came during a regular monthly luncheon meeting at Benny's Restaurant. Present to explain details of the proposed expansion was Henry Schroeder, a member of the hospital's Board of Governors.

The levy, due for a voting decision at the Nov. election, seeks 1½ mills for a five-year period to provide funds for the Berger project. Successful passage would mean about $900,000 for the expansion.

Schroeder noted that the total construction estimate calls for about $1,110,000. He further explained that the Board of Governors will make every effort to obtain Hill-Burton federal assistance funds to cover the deficit.

THE speaker also told of crowded conditions and the lack of doctors that now exists at the hospital.

Spokesmen for the Chamber's Retail Merchants Division indicated that local businessmen have expressed to desire to help advertise the levy and assist the Board's promotional committee.

New Satellite To Measure Rays of Sun

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—An Explorer satellite sped in a looping orbit of the earth today to measure the sun's radiation and its hazards to spacemen.

The 89-pound satellite's yo-yo course was intended to take it 53,000 miles from the earth and swing it back as close as 185 miles. The payload was hurled aloft Tuesday at 5:11 p. m. in the 12th straight successful satellite launching for the Thor-Delta rocket.

Though exact orbital figures cannot be confirmed for several days, Robert Gray of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said: "I see no reason to believe that we got anything but a normal performance. The apogee and perigee will probably be just about what we sought."

If successful, the experiment will produce the most extensive information yet on how the sun's radiation affects the earth's weather and communications and the dangers it poses for men and machinery in future deep space flights.

The extremely elliptical course was elected to enable the satellite to monitor high-energy particles over a wide area covering the earth's magnetic field, the Van Allen radiation belt and a section of interplanetary space above the belt.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Common pleas court judge Otis R. Hess was notified today that Albert G. Knaian, 70, charged with first-degree murder in the slaying of a Cincinnati lawyer, has been found to be insane.

Schirra Reports Everything Is OK

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Walter M. Schirra Jr. set a space flight record for American astronauts today when he completed a third orbit of the earth at 11:57 a. m. (EST). His Sigma 7 capsule zipped on in a "go condition" for the planned six orbit mission.

His exuberant description of the flight came down from the sky a few minutes earlier in a discussion with Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., monitoring the flight at the Point Arguello, Calif., tracking station.

"It's hard to describe things up here," Schirra told the man who had pioneered U.S. orbital flight earlier this year.

Schirra said he had a delightful report to make to Glenn: "I, too, see fireflies." He referred to the luminous particles which Glenn saw flying outside his spacecraft each time he went through a sunrise. At the end of the first orbit, Schirra also reported seeing the bright particles. He told of them in a talk with Astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter, who was at the Guaymas, Mexico, station.

Carpenter, on his flight last May, also saw the particles and was able to create them by pounding on the side of his capsule. This led scientists to believe that the fireflies—or snowflakes, as Carpenter called them—were pieces of frost breaking off the capsule and being illuminated by the rising sun.

As Schirra zipped above Cape Canaveral to begin orbit three, he commenced drifting flight for the first time. He shut off all controls and electrical power and allowed the craft to move freely on its roll, pitch and yaw axes.

In this phase, the vehicle rotates slowly, making about one revolution every 30 minutes if control is not reestablished by the pilot. In drifting flight, the capsule does not float far off course because it is flying an orbital path determined by the laws of nature, much like a bullet fired by a rifle.

Purpose of the drifting is to conserve control fuel and electrical power. Just how well Schirra did this was important to an 18 orbit 24 hour flight—the next U.S. manned-space shot set for 1963.

Schirra's flight, if it went six orbits, would nearly double the time spent by astronauts Glenn and Carpenter earlier this year. But it would be far short of Russia's manned orbital flight time.

Near the completion of the second orbit, Project Mercury operations director Walter C. Williams reported that the mission was proceeding very satisfactorily and he saw no reason why it shouldn't be continued.

Early in the flight, Schirra literally sweated out a problem with his spacesuit temperature control system. But as he neared the end of the second orbit, he said the problem had diminished to a point where it wasn't worth discussion.

About the end of orbit two, Schirra still had 90 per cent of his fuel supply remaining and Mercury Control reported he was managing it very well. The hydrogen peroxide fuel is used to fire small jets located on the capsule surface to help maintain the capsule's desired position in flight.

The flight plan called for Schirra to have 48 per cent fuel in both his tanks for both the automatic and manual control systems, and 35 per cent remaining in each before the vital reentry maneuver at the end of the flight.

Glenn and Carpenter both ran dangerously low on fuel during their three orbit flights. Both, in fact, had empty tanks after reentry. Mismanagement of the fuel system was blamed for the low supply in both cases.

Schirra carried the same amount of fuel that Glenn and Carpenter did, and one of his main assignments was to determine how well he could conserve it in setting guidelines for future U.S. space flights.

At the end of orbit two, Schirra reported to the control center at Cape Canaveral that all systems were performing very satisfactorily in the capsule and that he was ready to begin the drifting flight.

At 10:25 a. m., after three hours and 10 minutes of flight, Schirra was asked by the Bermuda tracking station: "Did you see Echo?" The astronaut did not see the big balloon communications satellite which was in the area, because he was conserving fuel and did not want to change the craft's attitude to look for it. At the same time, the ground controller asked him if it weren't time for him to eat and Schirra replied:

"I'm about due for lunch now." The capsule communicator told him, "have at it, and we'll leave you alone for awhile."

The space meal consisted of bite-sized solid cubes of high protein food.

Mrs. Schirra Lauds Liftoff

Astronaut's Wife Calls It 'Beautiful'

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—"It was a beautiful liftoff—I'm very glad everything went okay," Mrs. Walter M. Schirra Jr. said shortly after her husband went rocketing into orbit around the earth today.

Her brief comment was relayed to waiting newsmen by space agency official Roy Wallack, who told of watching the takeoff on television with the astronaut's family.

There were no audible sighs or other sign of tension, Wallack said. Except for a NASA security agent, he said only Mrs. Schirra, her son and daughter and her mother were keeping vigil at the Schirra home.

Mrs. Schirra wouldn't talk to reporters Tuesday about her husband's mission, but her young son said he was excited.

Newsmen who went to the home were asked to state their business via a speaker system. A voice from inside said:

"I am Mrs. Schirra's mother. Mrs. Schirra will not see anyone right now."

Newsmen asked if they could return.

"Just a minute. I will see if she is awake," the voice said.

There was a brief wait. "Mrs. Schirra says she will not have any comment until after her husband is recovered."

Mrs. Schirra's mother is Mrs. James L. Holloway.

Walter Marty Schirra III, 12, was more talkative.

"I'm real excited about it," the seventh-grader exclaimed. "The principal of Clear Creek Junior High School is going to let me stay home to watch. My mother, sister and grandmother will be there too."

His sister is Suzanne, 5.

Kaiser Steel Slashes Price, Awes Industry

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Kaiser Steel Corp., the nation's ninth largest producer, has announced a surprise $12-a-ton average price cut, citing competition with eastern U.S. prices and foreign imports, principally from Japan, as primary factors.

In New York City, Leslie B. Worthington, president of U. S. Steel, the nation's largest producer, said:

"Today's (Tuesday's) revision in Kaiser Steel Corp. prices is being studied, our schedule of prices will be revised so that we will remain competitive."

After studying the move overnight, Bethlehem Steel Co., the nation's second largest producer, announced that it will be "competitive as to steel prices on the West Coast."

In Cleveland, a spokesman for Republic Steel, rated No. 3 in production, declared eastern mills would find it impossible to absorb freight charges or cut prices to sell on the West Coast.

"It costs $40 a ton just to ship some steel products from Chicago to the West Coast, and eastern mills are only operating on a 3½ per cent margin on the sales dollar anyway."

New Satellite To Measure Rays of Sun

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—An Explorer satellite sped in a looping orbit of the earth today to measure the sun's radiation and its hazards to spacemen.

The 89-pound satellite's yo-yo course was intended to take it 53,000 miles from the earth and swing it back as close as 185 miles. The payload was hurled aloft Tuesday at 5:11 p. m. in the 12th straight successful satellite launching for the Thor-Delta rocket.

Though exact orbital figures cannot be confirmed for several days, Robert Gray of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said: "I see no reason to believe that we got anything but a normal performance. The apogee and perigee will probably be just about what we sought."

If successful, the experiment will produce the most extensive information yet on how the sun's radiation affects the earth's weather and communications and the dangers it poses for men and machinery in future deep space flights.

The extremely elliptical course was elected to enable the satellite to monitor high-energy particles over a wide area covering the earth's magnetic field, the Van Allen radiation belt and a section of interplanetary space above the belt.

Schirra Reports Everything Is OK

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Walter M. Schirra Jr. set a space flight record for American astronauts today when he completed a third orbit of the earth at 11:57 a. m. (EST). His Sigma 7 capsule zipped on in a "go condition" for the planned six orbit mission.

His exuberant description of the flight came down from the sky a few minutes earlier in a discussion with Astronaut John H. Glenn Jr., monitoring the flight at the Point Arguello, Calif., tracking station.

"It's hard to describe things up here," Schirra told the man who had pioneered U.S. orbital flight earlier this year.

Schirra said he had a delightful report to make to Glenn: "I, too, see fireflies." He referred to the luminous particles which Glenn saw flying outside his spacecraft each time he went through a sunrise. At the end of the first orbit, Schirra also reported seeing the bright particles. He told them of a talk with Astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter, who was at the Guaymas, Mexico, station.

Carpenter, on his flight last May, also saw the particles and was able to create them by pounding on the side of his capsule. This led scientists to believe that the fireflies—or snowflakes, as Carpenter called them—were pieces of frost breaking off the capsule and being illuminated by the rising sun.

As Schirra zipped above Cape Canaveral to begin orbit three, he commenced drifting flight for the first time. He shut off all controls and electrical power and allowed the craft to move freely on its roll, pitch and yaw axes.

In this phase, the vehicle rotates slowly, making about one revolution every 30 minutes if control is not reestablished by the pilot. In drifting flight, the capsule does not float far off course because it is flying an orbital path determined by the laws of nature, much like a bullet fired by a rifle.

Purpose of the drifting is to conserve control fuel and electrical power. Just how well Schirra did this was important to an 18 orbit 24 hour flight—the next U.S. manned-in-space shot set for 1963.

Schirra's flight, if it went six orbits, would nearly double the time spent by astronauts Glenn and Carpenter earlier this year. But it would be far short of Russia's manned orbital flight time.

Near the completion of the second orbit, Project Mercury operations director Walter C. Williams reported that the mission was proceeding very satisfactorily and he saw no reason why it shouldn't be continued.

Early in the flight, Schirra literally sweated out a problem with his spacecraft temperature control system. But as he neared the end of the second orbit, he said the problem had diminished to a point where it wasn't worth discussion.

About the end of orbit two, Schirra still had 90 per cent of his fuel supply remaining and Mercury Control reported he was managing it very well. The hydrogen peroxide fuel is used to fire small jets located on the capsule surface to help maintain the capsule's desired position in flight.

The flight plan called for Schirra to have 48 per cent fuel in both his tanks for both the automatic and manual control systems, and 35 per cent remaining in each before the vital reentry maneuver at the end of the flight.

Glenn and Carpenter both ran dangerously low on fuel during their three orbit flights. Both, in fact, had empty tanks after reentry. Mismanagement of the fuel system was blamed for the low supply in both cases.

Schirra carried the same amount of fuel that Glenn and Carpenter did, and one of his main assignments was to determine how well he could conserve it in setting guidelines for future U.S. space flights.

At the end of orbit two, Schirra reported to the control center at Cape Canaveral that all systems were performing very satisfactorily in the capsule and that he was ready to begin the drifting flight.

At 10:25 a. m., after three hours and 10 minutes of flight, Schirra was asked by the Bermuda tracking station: "Did you see Echo?" The astronaut did not see the big balloon communications satellite which was in the area, because he was conserving fuel and did not want to change the craft's attitude to look for it. At the same time, the ground controller asked him if it weren't time for him to eat and Schirra replied:

"I'm about due for lunch now." The capsule communicator told him, "have at it, and we'll leave you alone for awhile."

The space meal consisted of bite-sized solid cubes of high protein food.

Mrs. Schirra Lauds Liftoff

Astronaut's Wife Calls It 'Beautiful'

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—"It was a beautiful liftoff—I'm very glad everything went okay," Mrs. Walter M. Schirra Jr. said shortly after her husband went rocketing into orbit around the earth today.

Her brief comment was relayed to waiting newsmen by space agency official Roy Wallack, who told of watching the takeoff on television with the astronaut's family.

There were no audible sighs or other sign of tension, Wallack said. Except for a NASA security agent, he said only Mrs. Schirra, her son and daughter and her mother were keeping vigil at the Schirra home.

Mrs. Schirra wouldn't talk to reporters Tuesday about her husband's mission, but her young son said he was excited.

Newsmen who went to the home were asked to state their business via a speaker system. A voice from inside said:

"I am Mrs. Schirra's mother. Mrs. Schirra will not see anyone right now."

Newsmen asked if they could return.

"Just a minute. I will see if she is awake," the voice said.

There was a brief wait. "Mrs. Schirra says she will not have any comment until after her husband is recovered."

Mrs. Schirra's mother is Mrs. James L. Holloway.

Walter Marty Schirra III, 12, was more talkative.

"I'm real excited about it," the seventh-grader exclaimed. "The principal of Clear Creek Junior High School is going to let me stay home to watch. My mother, sister and grandmother will be there too."

His sister is Suzanne, 5.

Kaiser Steel Slashes Price, Awes Industry

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Kaiser Steel Corp., the nation's ninth largest producer, has announced a surprise $12-a-ton average price cut, citing competition with eastern U.S. prices and foreign imports, principally from Japan, as primary factors.

In New York City, Leslie B. Worthington, president of U. S. Steel, the nation's largest producer, said:

"Today's (Tuesday's) revision in Kaiser Steel Corp. prices is being studied. Our schedule of prices will be revised so that we will remain competitive."

After studying the move overnight, Bethlehem Steel Co., the nation's second largest producer, announced that it will be "competitive as to steel prices on the West Coast."

In Cleveland, a spokesman for Republic Steel, rated No. 3 in production, declared eastern mills would find it impossible to absorb freight charges or cut prices to sell on the West Coast.

"It costs $40 a ton just to ship some steel products from Chicago to the West Coast, and eastern mills are only operating on a 3½ per cent margin on the sales dollar anyway."

Tax Bill Veto Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans for Democratic Action urged President Kennedy today to veto the tax bill on the ground that it constitutes a "raid on the pocketbook of the ordinary taxpayer."

DiSalle Snorts At Rhodes' Education Plan

Idea Called 'Scheme' Designed to Offer 'Something for Nothing'

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Gov. Michael V. DiSalle commented acidly Tuesday night on the program for expanded higher education in Ohio which Republican James A. Rhodes promises to seek should he unset DiSalle in next month's election.

"The proposal isn't worth the paper it's written on," DiSalle said.

"It is another scheme rather than a plan," said the governor, here for a 12-hour speaking tour throughout Montgomery County. "He is again attempting to fool the people of Ohio into believing they are getting something for nothing."

Rhodes, state auditor, countered by issuing a statement from his Columbus campaign headquarters. He called his program, announced Tuesday, "the first specific move to provide for the enrollment needs of our universities."

Rhodes said his plan includes provision for establishing carefully planned research centers "rather than calling for a crash program to use general operating money."

Rhodes said financial support for his program would come, with voter approval, from an accumulating surplus in the $150 million capital improvements bond fund for construction at state universities. That way, there would be no need for new taxes, he said.

But DiSalle said such a surplus is nonexistent. He said there is "not 10 cents available"—and it would not be used for such a program even if it were available.

The governor said he had obtained an informal opinion from bond counsel advising that the funds are set up so that it would be illegal to try to use them for any purpose than originally intended.

DiSalle also flicked at the Rhodes plan's provision for a state board of regents for higher education. The incumbent candidate said such a board was included in a bill before the legislature last year. It died without drawing widespread complaint from educators and university administrators.

Rhodes, on the other hand, charged that DiSalle's plan for a research and development institute has illegal facets.

DiSalle's plan, issued last month, calls for a $100 million program—$10 million annually for 10 years—to establish a research and development institute and improve the state's higher education program.

"The need for a quick beginning on the capital expansion programs at state-supported universities is urgent," Rhodes told a women's group meeting in Geneva City during a tour of Ashabula County.

"Under my program, work should and can be started next year."

Rhodes asserted that the DiSalle administration, "which now decries the needs of higher education around Ohio, blocked the program (in the last legislature) needed to give us broader educational opportunities."

The auditor said his plan differs from one advanced by Gov. Michael V. DiSalle, incumbent Democrat, in that it does not propose a wasteful crash program. Under his proposal, Rhodes asserted, a board of regents would follow an orderly course of expansion designed to handle heavy enrollments anticipated by 1970.

Attorneys Seek To Avoid Mental Tests of Walker

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Attorneys for former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker are prepared to go to court today to seek his release from a government order committing him to a psychiatric examination.

Walker, charged with inciting insurrection and with seditious conspiracy in the University of Mississippi rioting, was brought from Oxford, Miss., to the U.S. Medical Center for federal prisoners here Monday night.

The order for committal was issued at Oxford Tuesday by U.S. Dist. Judge Claude Clayton.

Walker's family and friends attempted to arrange his freedom under a bond set for $100,000, but his attorneys were notified by U.S. Dist. Atty. F. Russell Millin that during the 60 to 90-day commitment he would not be bailable.

However, in Washington, Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy was quoted as saying Walker would be released on bail. Rep. Bruce Alger, R-Tex., said Kennedy assured him no examination of Walker could be made without a court hearing.

The 53-year-old Walker's attorneys advised him to refuse to cooperate in any prison-conducted examination.

Clyde J. Watts, his chief counsel, said Walker is willing to submit to an examination by any court-approved psychiatrist.

Walker was instructed, Watts said, "that his response to questions asked by physicians or psychiatrists at the medical center should be only his name, rank and serial number, the same as an American soldier who has been captured."

Walker, who commanded the troops which forced integration of Central High School in Little Rock, Ark., in 1957, is accused of rallying mob attacks against U.S. Marshals at Oxford.

The marshals were acting under presidential order to protect Negro student James H. Meredith during his registration at the then all-white university.

Watts said, however, that Walker told him "he at no time led any assault, charge or overt act against any state or federal officer, including U.S. marshals, and was in Oxford only to observe."

Walker, an Army veteran of 30 years, was relieved of his army command in Germany last year after a reprimand for trying to indoctrinate his troops politically. He resigned his commission and has become principal spokesman for ultra conservatives.

Stock Market Still Gaining

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market kept a narrow gain in slow trading early this afternoon.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .2 at 214.9 with industrials up .9, rails up .1, and utilities off .4.

Fractional gains among key stocks outnumbered losers.

A few of the pivotal issues were up a point or more, helping to bolster the averages, and the familiar assortment of "growth" stocks which have become trading favorites were ahead 2 or 3 points.

Fractional gains were displayed by U.S. Steel and Jones & Laughlin. Republic Steel was off a fraction.

A gain of a couple of points by Du Pont and a point by American Telephone helped bolster the averages.

Ohio PTA Planning To Buy Mansion

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc., has announced purchase of an historic 100-year-old Columbus mansion for the organization's first permanent headquarters.

The two-story brick building is directly across the street from the old State School for the Deaf. It is situated on land originally deeded by Thomas Jefferson, third president of the United States.

The congress has 2,316 units with 751,634 members.

The site of the mansion was deeded as a part of refuge lands by President Jefferson to John Allen. Since then the property has passed through many hands. The organization made the purchase from Miss Helen K. Hegner.

school hours, Jacobs declared. The policy adopted by the board also included truancy and illegal detention by parents as illegal absences.

THE NEW superintendent also submitted to the board chapters one and two of suggested board policies and job descriptions for elementary and high school principals. The booklet was distributed for study and consideration.

In other action, a letter from James Lint requesting he be relieved of his position as assistant wrestling coach was granted. No recommendations for his replacement were made.

The board also approved the appointment of Mrs. Susan Edwards as adviser for the Freshman SOS Club. Increment for the added duty is $150.

Rev. Floyd Adams was employed as a bus driver subject to filing a proper bus driver's license. He will replace Orin Bircher, whose resignation was accepted by the board.

Approval was also granted for the superintendent and board delegate, E. G. Grigg, to attend the Ohio School Boards Assn. meeting in Columbus, Nov. 13-15.

V. M. Cress, business manager, announced that 100 new lockers had been purchased for the high school. Cress said that the new lockers would relieve the current locker shortage in the high school, although some eighth graders still are assigned three-to-a-locker.

FRED Goeglein appeared before the board and presented a detailed explanation of the audio-visual television program now being utilized by many schools in the state.

The High Street building, approved last year as a pilot school for educational TV, has been approved as a charter member of the MPATI educational TV program originating from Purdue University, West Lafayette, Ind., according to Goeglein. He proceeded to explain the operation of the program and its advantages.

The November meeting of the board was changed from the regular meeting date (the first Tuesday of the month) to November 5, due to the General Election.

Dwindling Military Force Quells Ole Miss Showing

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — A dwindling military force moved in quickly today to quell a demonstration that broke out in front of the dormitory where the University of Mississippi's Negro student has an apartment.

Between 35 and 50 students gathered in front of Baxter Hall, set fire to an effigy of James H. Meredith and exploded fireworks.

Armed soldiers scattered the crowd quickly. There were no arrests.

Attendance at the university dropped after the enrollment of Meredith, a 29-year-old Negro from Kosciusko. Many students had returned to their homes after the weekend riots in which two men died.

University chancellor J. D. Williams appealed to the students to return. He said he had been informed the Ole Miss campus is now secure, and that parents can be assured of the complete safety of sons and daughters.

Meredith spent his second day as a student Tuesday, accompanied to classes by federal marshals. There were no demonstrations.

In another development over Mississippi's defiance of federal court orders to enroll Meredith, the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans gave Gov. Ross Barnett a form of probation until Oct. 12 on the contempt citation against him. This apparently was a move designed to test Barnett's willingness to accept Meredith's entry into the university.

Barnett, who was not in court, had no comment on the decision. He could be subject to $10,000 fine daily and imprisonment.

Army authorities announced a cutback in the 12,000-man federal force Tuesday night. Lt. Col. Roger Whiting, public information officer for the Army field command in Oxford, said two battle groups —about 2,400 men—left Oxford for Memphis while a third group of 1,200 was redeployed to Columbus, Miss. All were from the 101st Air

"Screaming Eagles" of World War II.

The situation at Oxford slowly returned to normal. Shopkeepers reopened their stores.

Water Program Needed

If you have a leaky faucet, you are contributing to the waste of what is rapidly becoming the world's most valuable resource. Water is receiving increasing attention from those whose knowledge of population growth, industrial processes and water consumption has convinced them that in a few years water shortages will be much more serious than the occasional inconveniences now experienced.

In the United States, there is a possibility that large sections of some states may be virtually abandoned for lack of water if present methods of collecting and salvaging it are not vastly improved. Fortunately, sufficient awareness of the problem now exists to forestall this if a solution can be found.

It is obvious that until the unlimited expanse of ocean water can be made economically usable and moved long distances efficiently, greater restrictions on the use and contamination of water can be expected.

Industry has no close rival as a consumer of water in the U. S. Its cooling processes alone account for half the total usage, a fact which is not surprising when it is mentioned that it takes 65,000 gallons of water to produce a ton of finished steel and 600,000 gallons for a ton of synthetic rubber.

Irrigation ranks second in consumption, and the individual user third. But, as in other areas dealing with diminishing supplies of a badly needed resource, waste is a major factor in the mounting demand for water. From the leaky faucet to the industrial user who makes no attempt to utilize the economies of reclaiming and reusing water over and over again, waste accounts for many billions of gallons of water each year.

Water is not yet a luxury in the United States as it is in many parts of the world. But at the current rate of increased consumption, it no longer flows from a bottomless reservoir.

Kissing Formula

Some researchers devote their lives to such necessary, presumably, pursuits as the life cycle of an evening primrose or what makes white pigment in house paint last longer than red.

There is another school of research which probably never will make the memorable deeds of history lists, but do its adherents have fun! Not long ago, after a great deal of nocturnal study and experimentation, these innovators came up with a formula for the kiss.

Now they have entered the arena of international social conduct, and have debunked a popular theory in the process. Latins, as everyone has been told at one time or other, are supposed to be among the world's most romantic lovers. Not so, according to a survey made of students at the University of Texas and the National University of Mexico.

American students answered their questionnaires by correlating love more frequently with such thoughts as "kissing," "exciting," "desire," "hunger," and

"melting." Mexican students, particularly the girls, showed a lack of sincerity toward romance, associating it with such words as "jealousy," "deceit," "sin," and "betrayal."

Perhaps the American Psychological Association, which is now studying the results of the survey, can pinpoint the reasons for such differences in attitudes between young people of neighboring countries.

Or perhaps the answer lies in the fact the subject students were selected from the first two years of college life, and as everyone knows, the American campus has a phenomenal propensity for instilling romance in its younger blood almost from the first day the student sets foot in the school.

So phenomenal, in fact, that not a few of the adult generation have wondered aloud as to the method of indoctrination used so that they might utilize it to create similar excellence in academic pursuits.

Due Process of Law

By George Sokolsky

The Anglo-Saxon Common Law theory, upon which all our laws are based, is that a man is innocent until proved guilty in a court of law, under rules of evidence, before a jury of his peers. The word peers accurately means equals. This rule protects the individual from the tyranny of the State, from the whims of officials and from indecent rumor and vengeful conduct.

There are other systems of law which hold otherwise, namely, that an accused person is guilty until proved innocent. Thus, it is possible for the government, by a mere accusation, to harass a person until life itself becomes unbearable. It is even possible to use "crimes against the state," in such countries, as a justification for a swift, secret decision and physical assassination by the government itself.

No chapter in our Constitution is more sacred than the Fifth Amendment which reads:

"No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation."

The term "due process" means that arbitrary conduct by officials is not lawful and that the citizen has recourse to the courts, step by step, until the government has proved the citizen guilty or the citizen has proved that the government has been arbitrary, whimsical and unlawful. Never has the due process phase of our judicial system been repealed but it has often been violated.

The principal violator against the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution has been the Internal Revenue Service which since the Administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt has been used for purposes for which it was never intended.

The Income Tax, which is lawful because it is permitted by an amendment to the Constitution (Amendment 16), was passed to assist the Federal Government to levy direct taxes. The Income Tax was not designed to redistribute wealth. It was not designed to give the Federal Government power over the State and Municipal governments. It was not designed to be used to prove persons guilty of other crimes by examining their tax records. It was not designed to harass citizens by constant and inappropriate investigation and examination.

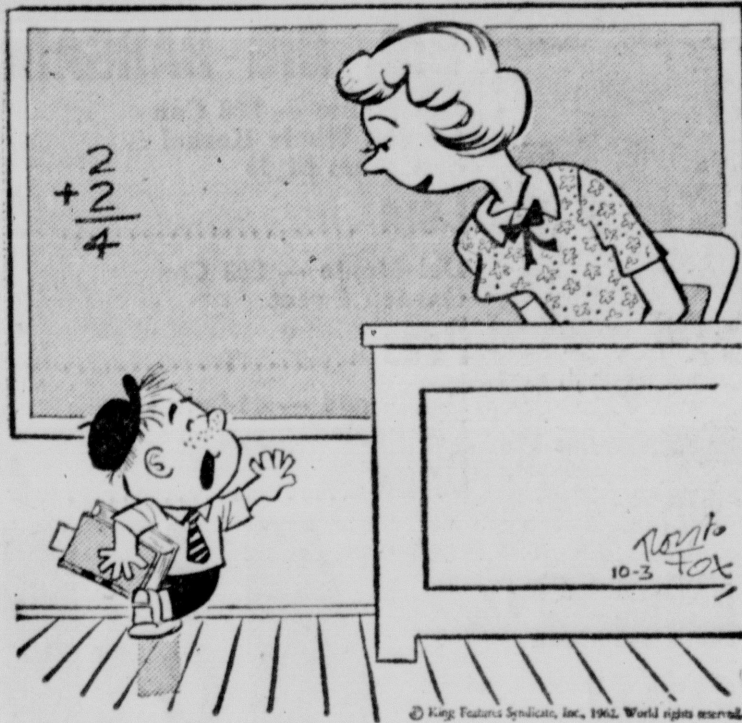

The seizure of the fight money in the Patterson - Liston fight may not be as important as an attempt to use the Income Tax to drive unfavored businesses abroad, but it becomes a serious matter when it is realized that due process was violated; that the Internal Revenue Service did not seize its share of the take, but the whole take, employing a large number of officials for the purpose, without warrant and without court action. This was done within hours of the actual operation, without explanation. Thus, the fighters, the vendors and purveyors, and the entrepreneurs were deprived of their returns on their efforts while the impounded funds are impounded for no reason.

Explanations are usually not offered by the Internal Revenue Service which has become the most arbitrary and intolerable agency of government. Its rulings are often harmful to the United States, the proof of this being the enormous flight of capital from this country and the large number of Americans who work outside the United States in order to avoid, not so much the payment of income taxes but the brutality and inhumanity of collection.

It was recently told that if a man who suffers from a major illness is ordered by his physician to a different climate, takes his wife along to care for him, he may not deduct from his income tax the cost of his wife's assistance, but if he takes a nurse, he may make such a deduction. Is this sense? Is it socially proper? Is it beneficial to the United States?

It has been said that the reason that the fight money was seized was that someone in the government does not like Roy Cohn, its entrepreneur. Are our laws designed for a beauty contest?

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

A BIG CORPORATION discovered that its head accountant had been robbing the firm consistently for years. The shortage was in the neighborhood of a million dollars.

Eager to avoid scandal, the president told the crook, "All we ask you to do is get lost." "Going to do it, eh?" asked the culprit. "Isn't that rather short-sighted? By now, I have a townhouse, a place in Florida, a yacht—every luxury a man could want. Why hire a new man who'll have to start from scratch?"

Erudite critic Walter Kerr likes to pun as much as the next fellow. He found on the breakfast table one morning a misadvised invitation to a dinner that had been held four nights previous. "Well," he commented, tossing the outdated invitation over to his wife, Jean, "There's one fete accomplished!"

There was a big reception held recently in the Princeton University Chapel, and a crotchety old lady buttonholed an usher to demand loudly, "Be sure to get me a seat down front, young man. I understand they've always had trouble with the agnostics in this chapel!"

Bill Zeckendorf's definition of a monologue: a conversation between a real estate promoter and a prospect.

Inside You and Yours

By BURTON H. FERN, M. D.

Dear Doctor: My grandson holds his breath until he turns blue and falls unconscious. Can this hurt him?

Mrs. H. G. (Va.) Dear Mrs. G.: Breath-holding spells are rarely serious. As soon as your grandson falls unconscious he forgets to hold his breath and takes in fresh air.

Ignore breath-holding spells as best you can and they'll soon stop. Meanwhile, you may have to pad floor, crib and playpen to guarantee complete safety.

Dear Doctor: Why should eating strawberries or peaches give me a throbbing headache?

Mrs. J. R. (Mass.) Dear Mrs. R.: An allergy—to peaches, strawberries or anything else—can release histamine chemicals that start the head throbbing and mimic typical migraine.

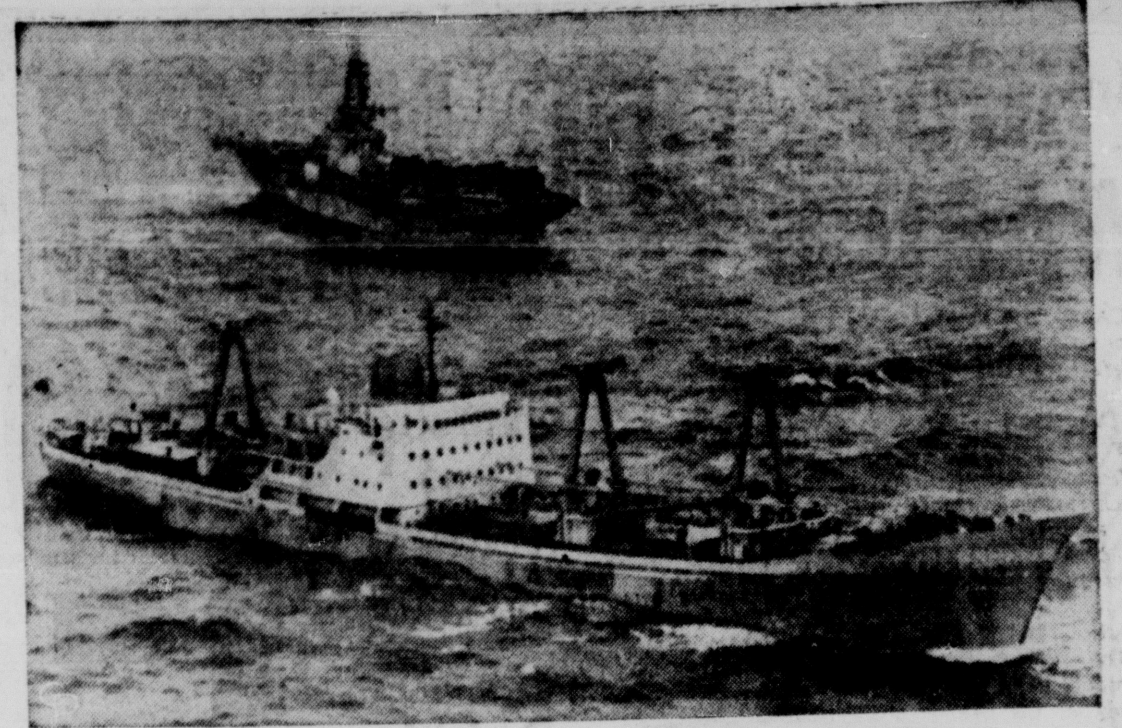

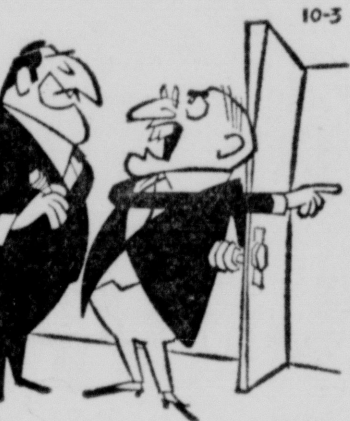

You can easily prevent this kind of migraine. Simply stop eating strawberries and peaches! Dear Doctor: Cortisone keeps my hands from breaking out when I work in a beauty parlor. Would prolonged use hurt me?

Mrs. A. S. (Ind.) Dear Mrs. S.: Ordinary doses could, but many asthma sufferers take tiny doses for years with no harm.

Better yet, ask an allergy specialist to patch-test your skin with all chemicals used in the beauty parlor. What looks like lotions of trouble may stem from only one brand or type—which you could easily avoid handling.

Dear Doctor: How can a diabetes sufferer guard against poor circulation in legs and feet?

Mrs. M. R. (Ark.) Dear Mrs. R.: Keep your diabetes under control with insulin.

CARRIER SAYS DITCHED PLANE LOST WING—The Canadian aircraft carrier Bonaventure (background, searching for survivors) sent a message to the Canadian naval office in London that gave an account of the last moments of the Flying Tiger super-Constellation that ditched in the gale-whipped North Atlantic about 55 miles off the coast of Ireland with 76 persons aboard. The plane's port wing was wrenched off, the message said. The other search vessel is the Swiss freighter Celerina. (Radiophoto)

The Business World

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK (AP)—If ever Americans really needed a World Series, the fracas opening Thursday is the one.

They shouldn't and can't close their minds to a host of worries pressing in just now. But for a few days at least they can find welcome hours of relief in submerging themselves in the battle royal between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts for the baseball champion ship.

The change in tensions should be healthy. For just now the other tensions all around seem to be rising—maybe just a passing illusion, but millions of harried Americans must feel that way.

If it isn't Mississippi, it's Berlin. If it isn't Cuba, it's the Congo.

The stock market has many biting their nails—both those who actually are losing money and those who can't figure out what's happening—or, more important, why it's happening and what the future holds.

The closing days of any congressional session aren't soothing to the nerves. This year the many issues being batted back and forth or deliberately being shoved aside till after the election seem more touchy than usual. Congress seems to be raising about as many questions as it is settling.

Nor can you lull yourself to sleep these nights by counting the economic statistics. Too many point up and too many point down, and most just seem to be not pointing at all.

So businessmen can watch the World Series for awhile and stop worrying about profits. Are earnings being squeezed dangerously? Are they orphans in a hostile government climate? Can they be pepped up by more efficiency? Let's talk about that next week.

Bankers and the nation's money managers can take a brief respite from fretting over the trend of interest rates—especially in the uncertain economic future. Maybe even the debate over whether our dikes against the loss of more treasury gold are high enough can be adjourned temporarily.

What to do about the European Common Market, supposing we can do anything, can wait for a few days surely. Then we can start worrying again. Will the new freer trade bill work out into actual tariff bargains with Western Europe that will increase American export opportunities? Or will the competition from Europe grow more critical as the Common Market grows even stronger? Should we fight it, or join it, or seek a mutually profitable compromise?

And still farther out are all the imponderables about the space race. Worrying about the Soviet Union beating us to the moon or about its orbiting nuclear payloads over our heads can't be really shelved. But for a few days baseball will do its best to soothe our nerves.

An Hour Speech in Five Minutes

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP)—It happens to everyone.

Sooner or later, the president of some organization you belong to comes up to you and says:

"George, I want you to give the main address at our dinner meeting next month."

Well, you point out that you're a man of few words, never made a speech in your life, and the prospect scares you to death.

But the president cuts into your pretty protests with an unflinching ultimatum.

"You have to do it, George. Everybody else I can think of is out of town."

"But what'll I talk about?" you ask lamely.

"Talk about anything," he replies brutally. "Don't worry—we'll lock the doors so they can't get away. But don't make it too long. Not over an hour."

An hour? That seems like an eternity.

But you buckle down gamely to the task of writing your speech.

For a solid month your boss at the office doesn't get a dime's worth of real work out of you. At home you growl like a bear at every disturbing sound as you scribble paragraphs after page of your speech. Genius is in labor.

Rehearsing your speech before the morning mirror, you gesture with your razor—and slash off the tip of your nose and part of one ear.

The evening before the meeting you rise at the family dinner table and give your speech its final tryout. The cat falls asleep first, then your kids, then your wife. She wakes up and looks at the clock as you finish.

"It's wonderful," she says and adds tactfully, "but it ran an hour and 55 minutes. Is that as long as you wanted?"

You sigh and throw away every other page of your manuscript. Comes the big night. Well, the minister praises the food in a 29-minute invocation. The preliminary speakers drone on, and on.

Then they introduce the distinguished persons in the audience, and it turns out everybody is distinguished—and has an equally distinguished wife.

Then they give awards for an hour. Then they announce the election of officers and the 35-member board of directors, each of whom must be presented individually.

At last it is your turn. The president gets up, gives you a 17-minute introduction, taking you from birth to the present moment.

As you arise he whispers: "We're running terribly late. Better cut your talk to five minutes. I don't think they can stand anymore."

You feel like crying, but what can you do? You give a couple of feeble wisecracks and then skip the rest of your speech and close with your peroration:

"Remember, as goes motherhood and the federal highway program, so goes America!"

Well, everybody likes the idea of his mother riding on a comfortable highway. The audience is also so grateful for being spared further boredom that all rise and give you a standing ovation. You are the hit of the evening.

Moral: The best way for a public speaker to make lifelong friends is to tell a joke, give a one-sentence constructive message—and then sit down as fast as he can.

Water Program Needed

If you have a leaky faucet, you are contributing to the waste of what is rapidly becoming the world's most valuable resource. Water is receiving increasing attention from those whose knowledge of population growth, industrial processes and water consumption has convinced them that in a few years water shortages will be much more serious than the occasional inconveniences now experienced.

In the United States, there is a possibility that large sections of some states may be virtually abandoned for lack of water if present methods of collecting and salvaging it are not vastly improved. Fortunately, sufficient awareness of the problem now exists to forestall this if a solution can be found.

It is obvious that until the unlimited expanse of ocean water can be made economically usable and moved long distances efficiently, greater restrictions on the use and contamination of water can be expected.

Kissing Formula

Some researchers devote their lives to such necessary, presumably, pursuits as the life cycle of an evening primrose or what makes white pigment in house paint last longer than red.

There is another school of research which probably never will make the memorable deeds of history lists, but do its adherents have fun! Not long ago, after a great deal of nocturnal study and experimentation, these innovators came up with a formula for the kiss.

Now they have entered the arena of international social conduct, and have debunked a popular theory in the process. Latins, as everyone has been told at one time or other, are supposed to be among the world's most romantic lovers. Not so, according to a survey made of students at the University of Texas and the National University of Mexico.

American students answered their questionnaires by correlating love more frequently with such thoughts as "kissing," "exciting," "desire," "hunger," and Industry has no close rival as a consumer of water in the U. S. Its cooling processes alone account for half the total usage, a fact which is not surprising when it is mentioned that it takes 65,000 gallons of water to produce a ton of finished steel and 600,000 gallons for a ton of synthetic rubber.

Irrigation ranks second in consumption, and the individual user third. But, as in other areas dealing with diminishing supplies of a badly needed resource, waste is a major factor in the mounting demand for water. From the leaky faucet to the industrial user who makes no attempt to utilize the economies of reclaiming and re-using water over and over again, waste accounts for many billions of gallons of water each year.

Water is not yet a luxury in the United States as it is in many parts of the world. But at the current rate of increased consumption, it no longer flows from a bottomless reservoir.

"melting." Mexican students, particularly the girls, showed a lack of sincerity toward romance, associating it with such words as "jealousy," "deceit," "sin," and "betrayal."

Perhaps the American Psychological Association, which is now studying the results of the survey, can pinpoint the reasons for such differences in attitudes between young people of neighboring countries.

Or perhaps the answer lies in the fact the subject students were selected from the first two years of college life, and as everyone knows, the American campus has a phenomenal propensity for instilling romance in its younger blood almost from the first day the student sets foot in the school.

So phenomenal, in fact, that not a few of the adult generation have wondered aloud as to the method of indoctrination used so that they might utilize it to create similar excellence in academic pursuits.

Due Process of Law

The Anglo-Saxon Common Law theory, upon which all our laws are based, is that a man is innocent until proved guilty in a court of law, under rules of evidence, before a jury of his peers. The word peers accurately means equals. This rule protects the individual from the tyranny of the State, from the whims of officials and from indecent rumor and vengeful conduct.

There are other systems of law which hold otherwise, namely, that an accused person is guilty until proved innocent. Thus, it is possible for the government, by a mere accusation, to harass a person until life itself becomes unbearable. It is even possible to use "crimes against the state," in such countries, as a justification for a swift, secret decision and physical assassination by the government itself.

No chapter in our Constitution is more sacred than the Fifth Amendment which reads:

"No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation."

The term "due process" means that arbitrary conduct by officials is not lawful and that the citizen has recourse to the courts, step by step, until the government has proved the citizen guilty or the citizen has proved that the government has been arbitrary, whimsical and unlawful. Never has the due process phase of our juridical system been repeated but it has often been violated.

The principal violator against the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution has been the Internal Revenue Service which since the Administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt has been used for purposes for which it was never intended.

The Income Tax, which is lawful because it is permitted by an amendment to the Constitution (Amendment 16), was passed to assist the Federal Government to levy direct taxes. The Income Tax was not designed to redistribute wealth. It was not designed to give the Federal Government power over the State and Municipal governments. It was not designed to be used to prove persons guilty of other crimes by examining their tax records. It was not designed to harass citizens by constant and inappropriate investigation and examination.

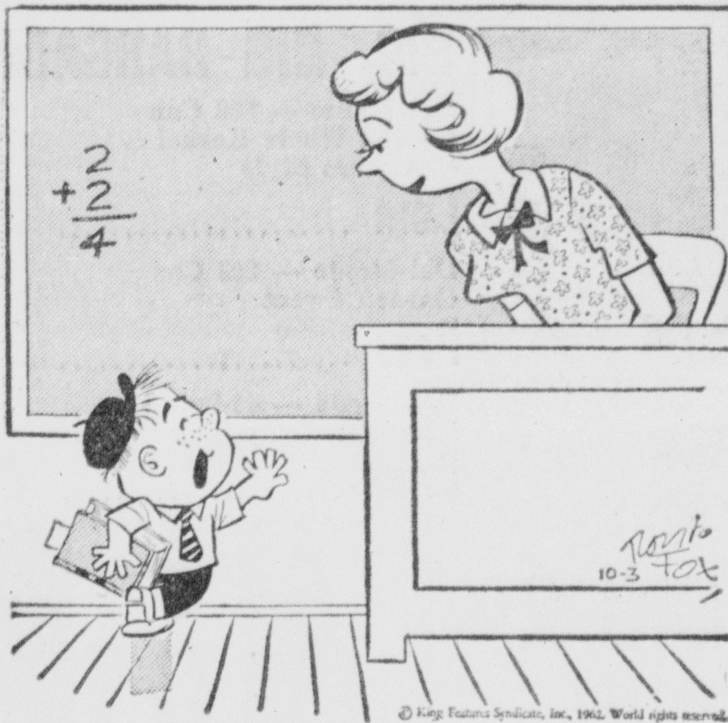

The seizure of the fight money in the Patterson - Liston fight may not be as important as an attempt to use the Income Tax to drive unfavored businesses abroad, but it becomes a serious matter when it is realized that due process was violated; that the Internal Revenue Service did not seize its share of the take, but the whole take, employing a large number of officials for the purpose, without warrant and without court action. This was done within hours of the actual operation, without explanation. Thus, the fighters, the vendors and purveyors, and the entrepreneurs were deprived of their returns on their efforts while the impounded funds are impounded for no reason.

Explanations are usually not offered by the Internal Revenue Service which has become the most arbitrary and intolerable agency of government. Its rulings are often harmful to the United States, the proof of this being the enormous flight of capital from this country and the large number of Americans who work outside the United States in order to avoid, not so much the payment of income taxes but the brutality and inhumanity of collection.

It was recently told that if a man who suffers from a major illness is ordered by his physician to a different climate, takes his wife along to care for him, he may not deduct from his income tax the cost of his wife's assistance, but if he takes a nurse, he may make such a deduction. Is this sense? Is it socially proper? Is it beneficial to the United States?

It has been said that the reason that the fight money was seized was that someone in the government does not like Roy Cohn, its entrepreneur. Are our laws designed for a beauty contest?

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

A BIG CORPORATION discovered that its head accountant had been robbing the firm consistently for years. The shortage was in the neighborhood of a million dollars. Eager to avoid scandal, the president told the crook, "All we ask you to do is get lost." "Going to can me, eh?" asked the culprit. "Isn't that rather short-sighted? By now, I have a townhouse, a place in Florida, a yacht—every luxury a man could want. Why hire a new man who'll have to start from scratch?"

Erudite critic Walter Kerr likes to pun as much as the next fellow. He found on the breakfast table one morning a misaddressed invitation to a dinner that had been held four nights previous. "Well," he commented, tossing the outdated invitation over to his wife, Jean, "There's one fete accompli!"

There was a big reception held recently in the Princeton University Chapel, and a crotchety old lady buttonholed an usher to demand loudly, "Be sure to get me a seat down front, young man. I understand they've always had trouble with the agnostics in this chapel!"

Inside You and Yours

Dear Doctor: My grandson holds his breath until he turns blue and falls unconscious. Can this hurt him?

Mrs. H. G. (Va.)
Dear Mrs. G.: Breath-holding spells are rarely serious. As soon as your grandson falls unconscious he forgets to hold his breath and takes in fresh air.

Ignore breath-holding spells as best you can and they'll soon stop. Meanwhile, you may have to pad floor, crib and playpen to guarantee complete safety.

Dear Doctor: Why should eating strawberries or peaches give me a throbbing headache?

Mrs. J. R. (Mass.)
Dear Mrs. R.: An allergy—to peaches, strawberries or anything else—can release histamine chemicals that start the head throbbing and mimic typical migraine.

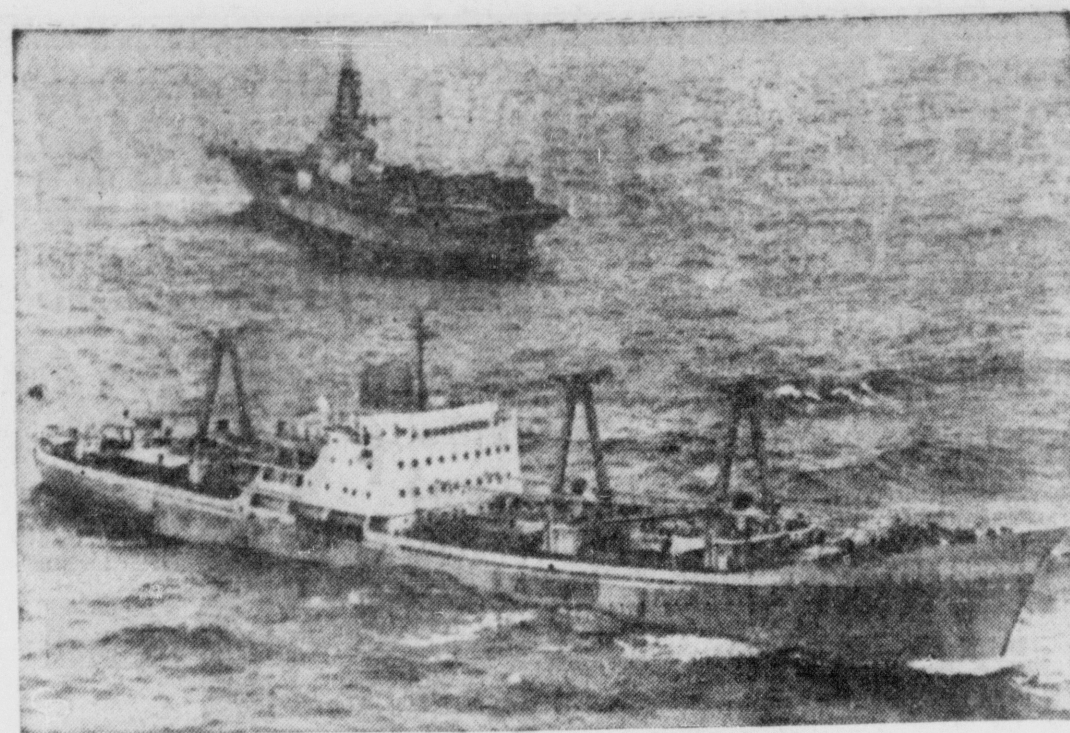

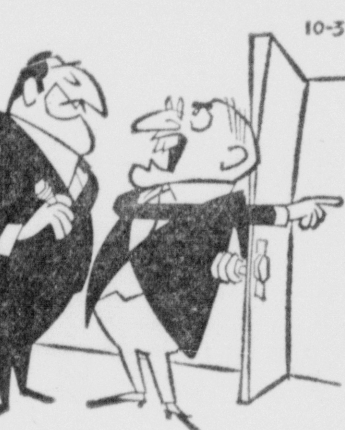

You can easily prevent this kind of migraine. Simply stop eating strawberries and peaches! Dear Doctor: Cortisone keeps my hands from breaking out when I work in a beauty parlor. Would prolonged use hurt me?

Mrs. A. S. (Ind.)
Dear Mrs. S.: Ordinary doses could, but many asthma sufferers take tiny doses for years with no harm.

Better yet, ask an allergy specialist to patch-test your skin with all chemicals used in the beauty parlor. What looks like lotions of trouble may stem from only one brand or type—which you could easily avoid handling.

Dear Doctor: How can a diabetes sufferer guard against poor circulation in legs and feet?

Mrs. M. R. (Ark.)
Dear Mrs. R.: Keep your diabetes under control with insulin.

The Business World

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK (AP)—If ever Americans really needed a World Series, the fracas opening Thursday is the one.

They shouldn't and can't close their minds to a host of worries pressing in just now. But for a few days at least they can find welcome hours of relief in submerging themselves in the battle royal between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts for the baseball champion ship.

The change in tensions should be healthy. For just now the other tensions all around seem to be rising—maybe by a passing illusion, but millions of harried Americans must feel that way.

If it isn't Mississippi, it's Berlin. If it isn't Cuba, it's the Congo.

The stock market has many biting their nails—both those who actually are losing money and those who can't figure out what's happening—or, more important, why it's happening and what the future holds.

The closing days of any congressional session aren't soothing to the nerves. This year the many issues being batted back and forth or deliberately being shoved aside till after the election seem more touchy than usual. Congress seems to be raising about as many questions as it is settling.

Nor can you lull yourself to sleep these nights by counting the economic statistics. Too many point up and too many point down, and most just seem to be not pointing at all.

So businessmen can watch the World Series for awhile and stop worrying about profits. Are earnings being squeezed dangerously? Are they orphans in a hostile government climate? Can they be pepped up by more efficiency? Let's talk about that next week.

Bankers and the nation's money managers can take a brief respite from fretting over the trend of interest rates—especially in the uncertain economic future. Maybe even the debate over whether our dikes against the loss of more treasury gold are high enough can be adjourned temporarily.

What to do about the European Common Market, supposing we can do anything, can wait for a few days surely. Then we can start worrying again. Will the new freer trade bill work out into actual tariff bargains with Western Europe that will increase American export opportunities? Or will the competition from Europe grow more critical as the Common Market grows even stronger? Should we fight it, or join it, or seek a mutually profitable compromise?

And still farther out are all the imponderables about the space race. Worrying about the Soviet Union beating us to the moon or about its orbiting nuclear payloads over our heads can't be really shelved. But for a few days baseball will do its best to soothe our nerves.

An Hour Speech in Five Minutes

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP)—It happens to everyone.

Sooner or later, the president of some organization you belong to comes up to you and says:

"George, I want you to give the main address at our dinner meeting next month."

Well, you point out that you're a man of few words, never made a speech in your life, and the prospect scares you to death.

But the president cuts into your pretty protests with an unflattering ultimatum.

"You have to do it, George. Everybody else I can think of is out of town."

"But what'll I talk about?" you ask lamely.

"Talk about anything," he replies brutally. "Don't worry—we'll lock the doors so they can't get away. But don't make it too long. Not over an hour."

An hour? That seems like an eternity.

But you buckle down gamely to the task of writing your speech.

For a solid month your boss at the office doesn't get a dime's worth of real work out of you. At home you growl like a bear at every disturbing sound as you scribble page after page of your speech. Genius is in labor.

Rehearsing your speech before the morning mirror, you gesture with your razor—and slash off the tip of your nose and part of one ear.

The evening before the meeting you rise at the family dinner table and give your speech its final tryout. The cat falls asleep first, then your kids, then your wife. She wakes up and looks at the clock as you finish.

"It's wonderful," she says and adds tactfully, "but it ran an hour and 55 minutes. Is that as long as they wanted?"

You sigh and throw away every other page of your manuscript.

Comes the big night. Well, the minister praises the food in a 29-minute invocation. The preliminary speakers drone on, and on. Then they introduce the distinguished persons in the audience, and it turns out everybody is distinguished—and has an equally distinguished wife.

Then they give awards for an hour. Then they announce the election of officers and the 35-member board of directors, each

'Instant Schoolhouses' Built, Taken Down in Scant Hours

By JAMES N. MILLER
Central Press Association
Correspondent

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — A demonstration classroom of a new, prefabricated "instant schoolhouse" has been completed here on the campus of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Designed by the Department of Architecture, the schoolhouse can be adapted to any community need, quickly assembled, converted to new needs, and even taken apart and reassembled at a new location.

The new concept in school construction was based on a four-year study of the use of prefabricated building panels for construction purposes.

Joseph Schiffer, instructor in architecture and designer of the project, explained: "We selected the school as a subject of study because there is now a pressing need for more school room space."

The design should enable school committees, working with their planners, to devise standard school plans with greater flexibility. They can employ the panel concept in mobile classroom structures, demountable classrooms and, in general, obtain a flexible shelter for a variety of educational systems."

"Prefabrication," Professor Goody elaborated, "offers an economy through mass production. However, regional factors such as economic and social organization of the community, involving teaching methods, and the viewpoints of school committees and educators set up varying requirements for the individual schools."

"We have designed this school so that such factors can be taken into consideration. Our school concept is an entire system — roof, walls, floor plan, joints and bolts, air conditioning, storage space. It is a versatile complete package."

The school is built of panels made of thin fiberglass outer skins bonded to a core of plywood. The panels are eight feet square and weigh about 270 pounds, or one-tenth the weight of a comparable concrete shell.

The basic structural unit of the school is called a "tree." It's a column with arms branching out in four directions to support the panels, and the completed unit forms a 16-by-16-inch "tree." Walls can be clipped in from four directions. Joined together, the units form a continuous roof and can be arranged in an almost endless variety of floor plans.

Reinforced concrete slabs and footings form the base into which the columns are set and aligned. Then the roof panels are raised, bolted together, and attached to the column head.

By using bolted joints, it is possible to disassemble the structure partially if a change in plans is desired. Or the entire structure can be disassembled, moved and reassembled at another site without difficulty.

The demonstration classroom, which has been erected near MIT headquarters in Cambridge, uses eight of the structural trees to form a room 32 feet square. It has an eight-foot overhang on all sides for sun protection.

"The room is manufactured, packed, shipped to the site, and erected for about the same cost as the solid, inflexible classroom that is built today," Professor Goody said.

"It can be erected in about one-tenth the time of a standard classroom the same size and, with air conditioning, is designed to be used 12 months a year. A room that is built for 30 children now, can be expanded for 300 later. It is designed to deal with new ways of thinking about schools and new ways of teaching."

The new school system was designed and the prototype erected under a cooperative project of the Departments of Agriculture and Civil Engineering, sponsored by the Educational Facilities Laboratory Inc., of New York. The structural work is under the guidance of Frank Heger, assistant professor of civil engineering.

John Eberhard of the School of Industrial Management is evaluating potential markets for this kind of classroom space and investigating the economics of the proposal. Twenty leading companies in the building materials industry have cooperated in the construction of the building.

A new kind of "wall-to-wall" carpeting is a feature of the "instant schoolhouse." It's made of rug "tiles," three feet square, which are readily replaced if damaged or worn.

Hal Roach Studio Auction To Bring Back Memories

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A lot of memories will go on the block Oct. 19 when the Hal Roach Studio is auctioned off to the highest bidder.

How ironic that the place that created so much laughter should come to such a sad end. For more than 40 years the Roach studio has been a landmark of comedy in Culver City. Now it is to be auctioned off in the United States court in Scranton, Pa., of all places.

The ads appeared in the Hollywood trade papers and other journals recently. They spoke glowingly of a 14.5-acre studio with 53 buildings down to and including a blacksmith shop. All this would go to the highest bidder, minimum bid $15 million.

Not listed in the prospectus were the tradition and lore that are also contained within the gates of the Hal Roach Studio.

Hal Roach had been a trucker in Alaska and Seattle, then landed in Los Angeles and started working as a cowboy in Universal movies at $25 a week. He teamed with a kid named Harold Lloyd in a series of comedies called "Lonesome Luke."

They were a success and soon Roach had enough capital to put up a studio in near by Culver City in 1919.

Harold Lloyd left Lonesome Luke behind for greatness on his own, but Roach survived. He developed a mischievous bunch of youngsters he called "Our Gang." Roach's greatest achievement was teaming the immortal Laurel and Hardy.

Double features came along to blight the Roach product, which was two-reel comedies. Even the classics of Stan and Ollie could not find a market because of the overlength movie bills. Roach got the message and went into features.

After the war, Roach worked fitfully at turning out small features. That didn't work and in 1948 he took a glimpse at the future and converted to television.

With Hal Jr. in charge, he studio turned out more film than it ever had—such series as "My Little Margie," "Fireside Theater," "Life of Riley," "Blondie," "Topper," "Duffy's Tavern" and "Amos 'n' Andy."

Then young Hal made a deal with bigtime operator Alexander Guterman, whose financial empire collapsed like a house of cards. With it went the Hal Roach Studio. Four years ago, the creditors turned off the lights in mid production.

The ads appeared in the Hollywood trade papers and other journals recently. They spoke glowingly of a 14.5-acre studio with 53 buildings down to and including a blacksmith shop. All this would go to the highest bidder, minimum bid $15 million.

Not listed in the prospectus were the tradition and lore that are also contained within the gates of the Hal Roach Studio.

Hal Roach had been a trucker in Alaska and Seattle, then landed in Los Angeles and started working as a cowboy in Universal movies at $25 a week. He teamed with a kid named Harold Lloyd in a series of comedies called "Lonesome Luke."

They were a success and soon Roach had enough capital to put up a studio in near by Culver City in 1919.

Harold Lloyd left Lonesome Luke behind for greatness on his own, but Roach survived. He developed a mischievous bunch of youngsters he called "Our Gang."

Roach's greatest achievement was teaming the immortal Laurel and Hardy.

Double features came along to blight the Roach product, which was two-reel comedies. Even the classics of Stan and Ollie could not find a market because of the overlength movie bills. Roach got the message and went into features.

After the war, Roach worked fitfully at turning out small features. That didn't work and in 1948 he took a glimpse at the future and converted to television.

With Hal Jr. in charge, he studio turned out more film than it ever had—such series as "My Little Margie," "Fireside Theater," "Life of Riley," "Blondie," "Topper," "Duffy's Tavern" and "Amos 'n' Andy."

Then young Hal made a deal with bigtime operator Alexander Guterman, whose financial empire collapsed like a house of cards. With it went the Hal Roach Studio. Four years ago, the creditors turned off the lights in mid production.

Today—Wide-Track Pontiac '63

Obvious, isn't it, that Pontiac's come up with another beauty this year. Fresh over-and-under headlights, clean profile—but you can see that. There's a wider Wide-Track, too, and a full line of Trophy V-8's. [That ought to be enough to make those other cars turn green.] And we haven't mentioned such happy touches as self-adjusting brakes. So what, pray tell, could be keeping you from a new Pontiac of your own? A small suggestion. Don't run down to see one. Gallop! Wide-Track Pontiac

The home of French bronco busters is a melancholy wilderness called the Camargue. Its 295 square miles in the Rhone River delta consist of salt flats, swamps and sheets of brackish water, shallow streams, spiky grass and clumps of scrub trees.

Dear Abby: He Sounds Questionable!

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow who has gone with this widower for three years. He wants to marry me but I can't seem to make up my mind. He never takes me anywhere. Every night he comes here and reads my paper. I fix him supper and afterwards he sits around and watches my TV. He says he has something set aside for a rainy day but I don't know whether to believe him or not. What do you think?

SLOW BUT SURE
DEAR SLOW: If you want to go on fixing him supper every night and letting him burn out your TV tubes, he sounds like a dandy. My guess is that for a rainy day he has set aside an old umbrella.

DEAR ABBY: Our 15-year-old daughter gets an allowance of $5.00 a week. She has no bus fare to pay or lunches to buy. It is "pocket money" to make her feel grown up and independent. We had hoped she would save something from it. Well, she hasn't saved a dime and she is always begging extra money for cosmetics and things that should come out of her allowance. All her money goes for records! She has a collection of over 300 (I counted them), and they are junky records that are popular one week and unheard of the next. She says it is her money and she can spend it any way she pleases. Is that right? How would you handle this situation?

DISAPPOINTED
DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Unless you instructed her from the start to save a certain part of her allowance, or spend it only on certain items, she is wit in her rights. However, tell her now that you expect her to save $1 a week. And if that, too, goes on the turntable, YOU turn the tables and withhold the allowance for a while.

DEAR ABBY: Is there any place near here where you can get married without a waiting period? We would like to leave in the morning and be home that evening as I have three children in school, live out in the country and I have been wanting to get married for a long time but couldn't spare the time.

"ME"
DEAR "ME": Call your clergyman or the local Justice of the Peace. Either will be able to acquaint you with the requirements in your immediate area. And congratulations!

DEAR ABBY: Your correspondent, "WOODROW WILSON HIGH CLASS OF '66" made me sick. He criticized his friend for boasting of a Harvard degree. But while criticizing his friend, HE boasts of a higher income in spite of having had no college education. I have met both kinds of bores. Of the two, I prefer the Harvard man.

The program concerning dried materials was given by Mrs. Harry Vincent and Mrs. Harry Matthes. They used their materials in twelve different tall and low arrangements. Their home materials included various weeds, flowers, driftwood and figurines, dock, golden rod, corn pods and husks, bittersweet and seed pods. Many were used for color only.

Mrs. Albert Vitch will be the guest speaker at the next meeting and everyone was urged to be present.

America Is Music-Minded

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN
Grandma's got the beat! She thumps it out with a wooden spoon on a frying pan in a kitchen band.

She's just one of the millions (33 at last count) who are filling America with sounds of music as amateur musicians from coast to coast strike up the band, the orchestra, the string quartet or the combo.

Music - making is the fastest growing leisure-time pursuit in the country. Everyone from toddlers to octogenarians is jumping on the bandwagon, finding that music (classical or pop) has charms.

People from all walks of life, in all occupations, in big cities and suburban towns are hitting the high notes (and the low ones).

Little Falls, N. Y., with a population of only 9,500 has a symphony orchestra of 70 amateur musicians.

Port Orchard, Washington, has a 50-piece elementary school band.

Chicago boasts a Business Men's Orchestra and Brooklyn a Doctors' Symphony. In Manhattan, Madison Avenue advertising and publishing executives have formed "The Oldest Floating Dixieland Jazz Band East of the Mississippi".

Senior citizens everywhere are mad about music. In Lodi, Calif., a band of 11 strike up old favorites. In Central Islip, N. Y., there's a group almost too hot to handle. Their instruments come right off the kitchen stove, for they play pots, pans and other cooking tools. Family groups figure importantly in music-making, too.

Frank Garland of Freeport, Maine, directs a harmonica band staffed by his six children, who play every harmonica from bass to a high chromatic instrument.

The John Burnham family of Vinton, La., has its own baby symphony setup. Dad plays the violin and viola, two of his sons favor the French horn, a third son and two daughters are clarinetists and another daughter toots the melody flute.

That's the story from coast to coast, for the nation is going music mad.

What's the reason? Psychological experts say music affords a means for self-expression, an outlet for creativity, a release from tensions and a form of rewarding social contact.

Sum it all up and the musical message is this: People find peace and pleasure in harmony. Music makes them happy. That's why it's popular.

If you like a thin gravy with chicken stew, use only one tablespoon of flour to each cup of liquid.

Australian Bears Living in Peril

By ARTHUR SCHOLES
Central Press Association
Correspondent

BRISBANE, Australia — Two top Sydney medical authorities have warned that people who cuddle koalas could be risking dangerous disease. The warning is contained in an issue of the Medical Journal of Australia.

The doctors said people cuddling koalas risked catching cryptococcosis, a fungus disease which can cause blindness. The doctors are Dr. A. Bolliger, director of research at the Gordon Craig Research Laboratories, and Dr. Ernest Fink, senior lecturer in pathology at Sydney University.

However, an Australian authority on koalas, Ian Reid, said here that 150,000 persons a year handled koalas at his koala sanctuary at Lone Pine near Brisbane.

Even Princess Alexandra cuddled a koala during her 1959 Australian tour. Reid said he did not believe the two were firm grounds to the doctors' fears.

"We have almost no sickness amongst our koalas," he said. "Our experience is that any disease they do have cannot be picked up by other animals or humans."

The two doctors have opined that disease and slow starvation have threatened to wipe out most of Australia's koala population.

Cryptococcosis, causing blindness and fits among them, is killing them off. Koalas also suffered pneumonia, leukemia and tumors which affected the female's reproductive organs.

Another expert has just said that healthy bears are being starved out of their haunts by closer settlement and the destruction of trees on which they feed.

The two scientists reported that cryptococcosis killed more than 20 per cent of koalas examined in 23 recent postmortems.

The disease was first recognized in koalas in 1959. Drs. Bolliger and Fink said that throughout New South Wales, and especially in Sydney, koalas were in danger of slow extinction.

Cryptococcosis probably was the most insidious cause of death. But scientists were handicapped because they did not know the source of the infection and its extent among the bear population.

Epidemics among koalas are believed to have killed millions of them in the years 1887 to 1889 and 1900 to 1903. The ailments responsible are thought to have been ophthalmic disease and peisistitis of the skull.

The disease is considered to be more prevalent among koalas in Queensland and North South Wales. Koalas in Victoria, which belong to a larger race, are thought to be more robust.

The unique koala could even now be close to survival level. The trouble begins with a low reproduction rate. Koalas breed every second year, as a rule, and mothers have one baby. Twin koalas are very rare.

They are full grown at about three years and may live to 20. It is unlikely that many each this age, however, because of the hazards of ugh flies, pedatos, and particularly the introduced fox and domestic cat gone bush, accident and disease.

Of these things, which may prevent a koala reaching middle age, let alone old age, disease may be the biggest single factor.

Koala feeding grounds in the Sydney area are becoming "very limited." The koala population has declined sharply on Warrigah Peninsula as the area becomes more closely settled. This was formerly one of the best-stocked koala grounds near Sydney.

The Fauna Protection Panel, with a $23,000 grant from Sir Edward Hallstrom, has been preparing a fauna reserve at Cowan, north of Sydney. The panel plans to transfer koalas from threatened areas to the reserve and to set up a laboratory to help preserve them.

One-Time Brazilian President Campaigns for Governorship

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP)—The familiar mustachioed figure with disheveled hair, horn-rimmed glasses and rumpled suit roams Brazil's richest state campaigning for governor. He doesn't talk like a candidate. He speaks at rallies as "your governor."

This is Janio Quadros, who turned the nation upside down 13 months ago by abruptly resigning as president. At 45, he is trying for a comeback in the place where his fabulous political career started as a Sao Paulo city alderman. Quadros is confident of victory in Sunday's election and is assumed to have an eye on the presidency again.

His confidence is not shared by everyone. His battle against two other major candidates is rated so close that hot sun or rain on election day could affect the outcome.

"Janio is so sure of election," goes an opposition joke, "that he has already set the date for his resignation from the presidency."

Political stunner the nation. Political opponents now charge he let the country down and set off the serious economic and financial crisis that has sent the value of the national currency—the cruzeiro—plunging from 260 to one U.S. dollar to 750 in a year's time. Janio, as everyone calls him, denies it.

"I did not provoke it," he says. "I revealed it. I denounced it. I diagnosed it. If a doctor identified a malignant tumor, can he be held responsible for the ailment?"

Virtually boycotted by the Brazilian press, Quadros is campaigning at the grass-roots level. He makes promises of revolutionary economic and social reforms but has not bothered to spell out a program. Nevertheless, he attracts good crowds. He is adept at the game of politicking.

His chief opponents are Jose Bonifacio Coutinho Nogueira, 39, a farmer-banker and descendant of an 1822 Brazilian independence fighter, and Adhemar Pereira de Barros, 61, wealthy former Sao Paulo mayor and ex-governor who has built up a strong following despite charges of corruption against his old administrations.

A fourth candidate in the race is a socialist who is given no chance of winning.

Bonifacio is strongly backed by incumbent Governor Carlos Carvalho Pinto, conservative Christian Democrat who supported Quadros' rise to the presidency but has since turned on him. Bonifacio pledges to continue Carvalho Pinto's long-range "plan of action" that has helped Sao Paulo pull far ahead of its sister states in development. He calls himself a nationalist, Christian, and Democrat.

De Barros, with a quarter-century of political experience behind him, is campaigning on a nationalist, anti-Communist platform although he once allied himself closely with Brazilian leftists. He is a Social Progressive.

Quadros, a loner, is running under no particular banner—only on his own name.

The governorship of Sao Paulo is one of Brazil's most respected elective offices. Because its 13 million people have the highest literacy rate in the nation, Sao Paulo polls a quarter of the national vote. Because of illiteracy, only about 16 million persons in

Australian Bears Living in Peril

By ARTHUR SCHOLLES
Central Press Association
Correspondent

BRISBANE, Australia — Two top Sydney medical authorities have warned that people who cuddle koalas could be risking dangerous disease. The warning is contained in an issue of the Medical Journal of Australia.

The doctors said people cuddling koalas risked catching cryptosporidiosis, a fungus disease which can cause blindness. The doctors are Dr. A. Bolliger, director of research at the Gordon Craig Research Laboratories, and Dr. Ernest Fink, senior lecturer in pathology at Sydney University.

However, an Australian authority on koalas, Ian Reid, said here that 150,000 persons a year handled koalas at his koala sanctuary at Lone Pine near Brisbane.

Even Princess Alexandra cuddled a koala during her 1959 Australian tour. Reid said he did not believe there were firm grounds for the doctors' fears.

"We have almost no sickness amongst our koalas," he said. "Our experience is that any disease they do have cannot be picked up by other animals or humans."

The two doctors have epoted that disease and slow starvation have threatened to wipe out most of Australia's koala population.

Cryptosporidiosis, causing blindness and fits among them, is killing them off. Koalas also suffered pneumonia, leukemia and tumors which affected the female's reproductive organs.

Another expert has just said that healthy bears are being starved out of their haunts by closer settlement and the destruction of trees on which they feed.

The two scientists reported that cryptosporidiosis killed more than 20 per cent of koalas examined in 23 recent postmortems.

The disease was first recognized in koalas in 1959. Drs. Bolliger and Fink said that throughout New South Wales, and especially in Sydney, koalas were in danger of slow extinction.

Cryptosporidiosis probably was the most insidious cause of death. But scientists were handicapped because they did not know the source of the infection and its extent among the bear population.

Epidemics among koalas are believed to have killed millions of them in the years 1887 to 1889 and 1900 to 1903. The ailments responsible are thought to have been ophthalmic disease and peiosis of the skull.

The disease is considered to be more prevalent among koalas in Queensland and North South Wales. Koalas in Victoria, which belong to a larger race, are thought to be more robust.

The unique koala could even now be close to survival level. The trouble begins with a low reproduction rate. Koalas breed every second year, as a rule, and mothers have one baby. Twin koalas are very rare.

They are full grown at about three years and may live to 20. It is unlikely that many each this age, however, because of the hazards of ugh flies, pedatos, and particularly the introduced fox and domestic cat gone bush, accident and disease.

Of these things, which may prevent a koala reaching middle age, let alone old age, disease may be the biggest single factor.

Original Home of 'Mylar' Polyester Film

EDITOR'S NOTE — As a salute to industry, the Circleville Area Chamber of Commerce and The Herald have undertaken to compile and publish a series of background stories on industry and the valuable part it plays in this community. The city is proud of its industries and the vital role they assume in promoting progress here. Today's story is devoted to the ever expanding Du Pont Co. film production and allied operations.

The Circleville plant, operated by the Du Pont Company's Film Department, is the first commercial facility for manufacture of "Mylar" polyester film.

Construction of the plant was started early in 1953, and the first film was produced in July, 1954. Steadily increasing applications for the product have led to two major expansions of the plant and to construction of separate laboratory and office facilities for the "Mylar" polyester film research and development laboratory.

Du Pont started operation of a second plant for "Mylar" in the spring of 1961 in Florence, S. C.

On Sept. 19 of this year the company announced plans for its third expansion at the Circleville site, a unit which will manufacture "Teflon" FEP film. Construction is scheduled to start in the near future and production is slated for early 1964.

THE NEW unit will be an L-shaped structure, covering 10,000 square feet, situated immediately to the west of the present plant building. Approximately 150 construction workers will be employed at the peak of erection activity. According to Du Pont officials, the "Teflon" FEP film operation initially will provide about 20 operating jobs.

The site two miles south of Circleville originally was chosen because of availability of suitable land, abundant water supply, clean air, reliable electric power, proximity to rail and highway transportation, availability of capable people, good living conditions for employees within a reasonable distance of the plant, and a friendly attitude toward industry on the part of the people.

At time of start up, the plant employed about 225 persons. This number has gradually increased to the present level of nearly 800.

In 1961, the operations of the plant generated nearly $7,000,000 in direct buying power in the Circleville - Chillicothe - Columbus-Lancaster area. Payrolls amounted to $5,262,571.

In addition, the plant and laboratory purchased $989,000 worth of materials and services from 164 Circleville concerns and another $747,000 worth of materials and services from 541 concerns in Chillicothe, Lancaster and Columbus. An additional $775,000 was spent for materials and services from 510 other Ohio suppliers outside the local area.

"MYLAR" POLYESTER film is polyethylene terephthalate, the condensation polymer of ethylene glycol and terephthalic acid. It is one of the products developed from a Du Pont research project which led to synthesis in 1944 of high molecular weight polyethylene terephthalate.

Other DuPont products stemming from this discovery are "Dacron" polyester fiber and "Cronar" polyester photographic film base.

Following the discovery, it was learned that British scientists independently, and by what turned out to be nearly identical procedures, had also discovered polyethylene terephthalate. On learning of the British research, DuPont negotiated for the patent rights for the specific work selected for development.

"Mylar" polyester film resists attack by most chemicals, is an excellent electrical insulating material, and retains its properties over a wide range of temperatures. It is used as an insulating material for electrical devices, in motors, wires and cables, capacitors and coils; as a base for magnetic recording tapes; as a base for metallic yarns, as a protective and decorative surfacing material in laminations with other materials; as a drafting material; and in an ever-growing variety of industrial applications.

Because of its strength and resistance to extremes of temperature, metallized "Mylar", one-half mil thick (about half as thick as the cellophane on a pack of cigarettes), was chosen by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration as the material for its 100-foot diameter Echo I satellite, the world's first inflatable space vehicle, launched from Cape Canaveral Aug. 12, 1960. Echo I is still in orbit, and as of mid-June, 1962, had traveled about 250 million miles.

The outlook for "Mylar" polyester film is excellent. Sales set a new record in 1961, as they have in each succeeding year since start of commercial production in 1954. It is expected that 1962 will set another high.

During 1961, more than 200 new uses for "Mylar" were devised by American industry, ranging from conveyor belting for egg-collecting machines in insulation for refrigerator motors; from new "long-play" magnetic recording tape to tire patches; from "expandable" window closures around air conditioning units to pressure sensitive strapping tape for industrial packaging.

AMONG new forms of the film developed during 1961 by the Circleville research and development laboratory is "Mylar" T, a film with a tensile strength of 40,000 pounds per square inch, which puts it in the same strength class as common metals.

Richard E. Heckert, who joined DuPont in 1949, is manager of the Circleville plant. Robert L. Burton, who began his company career in 1946, is director of the "Mylar" polyester film research and de-

JFK's Ohio Appearance To Be Brief

CINCINNATI (AP)—A speeded-up schedule is to bring President Kennedy to Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky for less than two hours next Friday.

That was the report Tuesday night after a conference of greater Cincinnati Democratic leaders. White House aides and Secret Service advance men.

This was the itinerary: 4:15 p.m.—Touchdown of the President's plane at Greater Cincinnati Airport in Boone County, Ky., where Kennedy will give a speech.

4:45 p.m.—Fast motor trip from the airport to Cincinnati via Interstate 75.

5:15 p.m.—A speech by the President at a Democratic rally in Cincinnati's downtown Fountain Square.

Immediately after the Fountain Square speech, the President is slated to head back for the airport for a flight on to Detroit.

Hamilton County Democratic leaders said the President planned a major policy speech in Cincinnati, but there was no indication of the subject.

The President's trip is partly to plug for Democratic candidates in Ohio and Kentucky.

velopment laboratory.

Members of the plant staff, with the year in which each joined DuPont, are: Joseph R. Bartz, manufacturing superintendent, 1948; Samuel P. Foster, technical superintendent, 1947; William P. Sprague, works engineer, 1945; Bascom B. Deffenbaugh, employee relations superintendent, 1930; Lloyd E. Horning, accounting superintendent, 1923; Robert W. Hutzelman, methods supervisor, 1945.

As is the case with all DuPont plants, the Circleville plant is a safe place to work. As of May 31, 1962, the men and women of the plant and laboratory had worked for 655 consecutive days, or 2,846,103 man-hours, without lost-time or disabling injury, a safety record which is still continuing.

Harsha Reports

6th District Poll Discloses Concern over Foreign Policy

Congressman William H. Harsha, Sixth District of Ohio, today released the results of the public opinion poll he has been conducting in the 6th District for the past month.

He stated it had been his purpose to solicit the opinions of the people to determine their feelings about important issues that are awaiting action by the Congress so that he could give the best representation possible. Participation in the poll was not limited to any special group but distributed widely throughout the District.

The poll contained nine questions relating to matters of domestic and foreign policy. He stated it was surprising that the tabulation indicated such definite trends in the thinking of the people in the district. The results show that the opinions on more than half of the questions registered more than 75 per cent support or opposition.

Congressman Harsha stated the people expressed great concern over the weakness of our foreign policy and the concessions being offered to the Soviet Union by relaxing inspection requirements on nuclear testing.

Another issue of vital importance and concern is the activity of labor leaders who have encouraged strikes at missile bases, thereby placing the national defense program in jeopardy. The citizens of the district want such strikes outlawed.

He indicated there was considerable opposition to the federal government subsidizing transportation facilities in urban areas stating that the citizens apparently feel this is a matter of local concern that should be handled by private enterprise with the users of the facilities paying for the service as is customary with utilities, whether it be a commodity or a service that is being sold.

Likewise considerable opposition was expressed to the construction of fallout shelters.

Harsha said every survey has its limitations and that brevity in questioning does not permit comprehensive answers embracing all facets of an issue and that he realizes it was very difficult to answer a question by a simple yes or no adding that many thousands of persons returning the questionnaires included comments discussing the issues.

He stated that although these comments were extremely helpful to him in assessing the feelings of the people of the District, it was not possible to reflect them in statistical form.

He did point out, however, that a large proportion of those making comments expressed serious concern and outspoken opposition to increasing the powers of the President and greater Federal expenditures that are producing mounting deficits and adding to the burden of the national debt.

Arizona Jury Eyes Slaying

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—A Superior Court jury has begun deliberations in the murder trial of Warren Carl Sherrick, 32, accused in the robbery-slaying of a Phoenix tavern owner.

The state asks that Sherrick, of Lima, Ohio, be sent to the gas chamber for the May 24 slaying of Lewis A. Taylor, 55.

Superior Court Judge Kenneth C. Chatwin instructed the jury it could return one of three verdicts—guilty of first-degree murder with the death penalty, guilty of first-degree murder with life imprisonment, or acquittal.

He said the jury could not consider verdicts of second - degree murder or manslaughter because the crime did not fall under either of those charges.

Sherrick also is accused of killing a waitress in Lima last March.

Top Physicists Say World Of Atom Is All Fouled Up

CINCINNATI (AP)—The world of the atom is in a mess, P.A.M. Dirac says.

The Nobel Prize - winner and five other renowned physicists are in Cincinnati to help straighten it out.

But they didn't hold out much hope that the tangles of quantum theory and reality could be unscrambled now or in the near future.

The physicists—among the top in the world—agree that the time is ripe for something to be done. That is a reason for the Xavier University conference on the foundations of quantum mechanics.

Quantum mechanics or theory is the study of how atoms and atomic particles act, react and interact. It includes the behavior of the multitude of forces acting on the tiny corpuscles of matter and the various rays of energy affecting atoms.

One of the results of the conference may be to expand the rules of the subatomic road to life-size. Another may be to precipitate a search for an undiscovered entity, a kind of ghost phenomenon that was another reason for the conference.

This phenomenon—action at a distance—seems to indicate that either matter can be in two places at once; that an action can be transmitted across a large distance instantaneously, or that the normal way of looking at nature is too confined, too narrow or limited a view.

This sounds a little like the situation when quantum mechanics was born around 1900 with the work of German scientist Max Planck.

He realized that a beam of light—or any similar activity is not a continuous action but billions of bits of energy or quanta.

The problem today, as in 1900, is that great amounts of information from experiments is available but there is no completely satisfying explanation for why things act as they have in the experiments. For example, two photons may act as though they are tied together although they are inches apart. This is equivalent to some simple act on earth having an instantaneous reaction on the surface of the sun—93 miles away. This happens at once—and it takes light, the fastest thing known, eight minutes to get from the sun to the earth.

It is like being a detective, Dr. Eugene P. Wigner, said Monday at a press conference, who has too many clues. Things are very complex until an additional clue

TODAY In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 3, the 276th day of 1962. There are 89 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this day in 1954, a treaty to integrate West Germany politically and militarily with Western Europe was signed by the U. S., Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands, Canada, Luxembourg and West Germany.

On this date: In 1789, President Washington proclaimed Nov. 26 a day of general thanksgiving.

In 1863, President Lincoln proclaimed the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day.

In 1913, President Wilson signed the Underwood Tariff Act.

In 1960, Dag Hammarskjöld rejected Communist - led demands for his resignation as United Nations secretary-general.

Today's birthday: Actress Glynis Johns is 39. Thought for today: Of all the paths leading to a woman's life, pity is the straightest—John Fletcher.

City Goofs on Phone Bill or a flash of insight ferrets the simple answer from the mass of facts.

Dr. Wigner is professor of mathematical physics at Princeton University. He is credited with conceiving the need to inform President Roosevelt that the United States must build an atomic bomb before some other nation did. He also won the Atomic Energy Commission's Enrico Fermi Award in 1958 for his contributions to the design and theory of atomic reactors.

Dr. Dirac is professor of physics at Cambridge University, England, and won the 1933 Nobel Prize in physics with the late Erwin Schrodinger for his work in quantum mechanics and development of the theory of the spinning electron.

Others who will take part in the sessions of scientific "brainstorming" at XU are Dr. Nathan Rosen, Dr. Wendell H. Furry, Dr. Yakir Aharonov and Dr. Boris Podolsky.

Dr. Rosen and Dr. Podolsky, with Einstein, published a paper in 1935 that posed the problem of action at a distance.

Dr. Rosen is now at the Technion Institute, Haifa, Israel. Dr. Podolsky is professor of physics at Xavier and conference chairman.

Dr. Furry, professor of physics at Harvard University, is a native of Plainfield, Ind., and Dr. Aharonov is professor of physics at Yeshiva University, New York.

Minneapolis Showplace Due To Help Revive U.S. Theater

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP)—Next May 7 the Tyrone Guthrie Theater will open here as a gleaming showplace, billed as the best new hope for breathing life back into the living American theater.

It is now a jumble of scaffolding and cement forms. But the revolutionary, asymmetrical theater is taking shape. When finished, it will offer an example of how a progressive city, prodded by theater zealots and a stage genius, might be able to rescue the legitimate theater from its expense-account ghetto.

It all started a couple of years ago. Tyrone Guthrie, whose stature as a stage director matches his own size (6 feet 5), grew weary of the over-priced, hit-or-flop commercial theater of New York City. Together with Broadway producer Oliver Rea, he expressed a desire to start a grassroots theater in the United States along the lines of English repertory.

Sir Tyrone and Rea barnstormed the country for prospective cities. They were well received, though in one city the mayor chatted with them for 15 minutes about Irish whisky; he thought Guthrie was a salesman for it.

The choice narrowed down to three cities far enough removed from Broadway and tryout towns: Minneapolis, Cleveland and Milwaukee. Minneapolis won because: 1. It had a good record in boosting art and music; 2. Nearby University of Minnesota had a graduate drama school to provide a workshop group; 3. Minneapolis and St. Paul offered a ready audience of 28,000 college students.

Then there was the matter of money.

"Minn will come through," said the confident Guthrie. Minn did. With publishing heir John Cowles Jr. as president, the Tyrone Guthrie Theater Foundation raised $2,150,000 from 3,500 local families. Guthrie signed on for three years at much less than his usual salary.

The first play will be an American "Hamlet," starring the young Southern actor George Grizzard (the nasty senator in the film "Advise and Consent"). Guthrie and Rea are recruiting other actors in New York and Hollywood. Joanne Woodward and Diane Baker have been mentioned for Ophelia.

The idea is to have a company of 25 professionals — 15 male, 10 female — to perform four well-known plays in a 20-week period starting in May. This time span was chosen to take advantage of the 250,000 visitors to the Twin Cities during that time; also it is the slack period for television actors.

NEWS-MAKING ROOF FROM MONTEREY. The advantages of Monterey's distinctive styling go far beyond its beauty. This is elegance that works. See how the recessed rear window slants inward? It stays clearer in rain or snow. On hot days, it opens for breezeway ventilation. The overhanging roof shades rear-seat passengers from the sun, gives more headroom, keeps glare off the rear window for better rearview visibility. More good news: a Mercury Marauder 390 V-8 is Monterey's standard engine.

SPARKLING NEW MODELS FROM METEOR. For 1963, Meteor is the hot brand. Meteor is the sparkler with a whole new line of models in the low-price field—sleek new low-to-the-road hardtops, sedans, and three new station wagons. Feel sporty?

Try the racy Meteor S-33 hardtop, with individually adjustable bucket seats and a handy console. For brilliant performance to match Meteor's sparkle, a new Lightning 260 V-8 is available in every model. And you save on upkeep with Mercury service-savers.

THE LID'S OFF COMET. Now a jaunty new convertible joins Comet's all-fun line. This sleek, rakish beauty comes in two models: the Custom and the dashing S-22, with bucket seats and optional stick shift. All Comets now have a complete package of service-savers like self-adjusting brakes. And Comet still heads its class with the largest trunk, longest wheelbase, and best resale value record. See Comet's whole happy '63 line-up: convertibles, sedans, station wagons. Fun-test your favorite Comet now!

Future of All Christendom To Be Influenced by Talks

EDITOR'S NOTE—The future of Christendom will be deeply influenced at the decisions which come from the Vatican Council, which begins meetings next week in Rome—the first in 92 years, the 21st since the days of the apostles. Here, in the first of three articles an AP religion news writer who will cover the meetings probes their plans and promise.

By GEORGE CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Pivotal changes apparently are in the making for the Roman Catholic Church.

Just what form they will take, and how far they will go, hinge on the 2nd Vatican Council, opening Oct. 11 in Rome—the largest gathering of ecclesiastical authorities in the Church's 2,000-year history.

Its decisions will affect, directly or indirectly, the whole of Christendom.

The aim is a general renovation in the life and operating structure of the Church. Pope John XXIII's favorite word for it is "aggiornamento"—bringing the Church up to date.

"The coming council will effect a real reform in the Church," says the Most Rev. Lorenz Jaeger archbishop of Paderborn, Germany.

This doesn't imply any changes in basic beliefs, but council planners say it does mean clarification and fuller interpretation of certain doctrines, as well as a reshaping of many policies and practices.

The council is the first in 92 years for the Church and, as Rome counts it, the 21st such convocation since the time of the apostles.

None of the others has had such thorough preparations — an intensive process that has involved about 700 churchmen in various countries serving on a battery of commissions for the past three years.

The approximately 2,800 "suc-

Disposition Of 43 Cases Made by Court

Forty-three cases were disposed of in Pickaway County Common Pleas Court during September, according to a report today from the Clerk of Courts office.

The comparatively large number of dispositions was attributed to the regular session of the grand jury which met last month.

The court's backlog showed disposition on 23 divorce actions 11 other civil suits and nine criminal cases.

At the beginning of the month 197 cases were pending in the court; 41 new cases were filed, making a grand total of 238. With the disposition of 43 cases during the month, a balance of 195 cases were pending action as the new month began.

Seventeen cases during September were tried to court and only one was tried before a jury. Three were convicted and default judgments and 22 were settled or dismissed.

Other cases pending in the court is one traffic point system case. The Court of Appeals also has one case pending action.

cessors of the apostles," cardinals, archbishops and abbots, in conjunction with the Pope, constitute the Church's ruling hierarchy.

About 75 or more delegate-observers will be on hand from other denominations, at Rome's invitation. Although they will not have a vote, they will sit in on general discussion sessions closed to the press.

All told, the council may bring up to 10,000 visiting participants to Rome. It is expected to continue until mid-1963, with recesses for Christmas and Easter.

Keen interest, both among Catholics and members of other churches, has centered on possible steps to foster Christian reunion—a cause strongly espoused by Pope John.

In view of the old, entrenched obstacles, however, there is clearly no intention of attempting reunion now. But many Catholic leaders expect the council to reduce some of the obstacles.

There are about a billion Christians in the world, 550 million of them Roman Catholics.

The council, says Archbishop Karl J. Alter of Cincinnati, will "review every phase of church life — doctrine, liturgy, law, missions, training of the clergy, sacraments, revision of the liturgical books."

Kennedy Signs Bond Bill To Assist U.N.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy signed the U.N. bond bill here Tuesday and gave the first of the dozen pens he used to U.N. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson.

Leaders of the House and Senate, along with members of the Foreign Affairs committee of both houses, attended the ceremony in the President's office.

Kennedy expressed his gratification at enactment of the bill, which authorizes the United States to buy bonds issued by the United Nations to meet the costs of enforcing the peace in the Congo, Middle East and elsewhere.

Under the measure Kennedy may lend the United Nations up to $100 million on 2 per cent, 25-year bonds, but not more than the total purchases of all other U.N. members.

At last count, 17 other nations had bought $27.5 million worth of the proposed $200-million bond issue, and 26 other nations had pledged to purchase $45 million more.

The U.N. financial crisis stems from the refusal of Soviet bloc and other nations to pay their assessments.

Use of Sabin III Polio Vaccine Held for Children

WASHINGTON (AP)—Dr. Albert B. Sabin of Cincinnati, developer of the oral polio vaccine, attended an 11-hour meeting Tuesday night but failed to sway a previous recommendation that Type III Sabin vaccine be used only for children.

Dr. Sabin staunchly has advocated use of Type III, as well as the generally approved Types I and II, for adults as well as children. But the special advisory committee to Surgeon General Luther L. Terry decided to stick with its Sept. 15 recommendation of Types I and II for all citizens but Type III only for children.

Ohio Turnpike Plans To Pay on Its Debt

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Turnpike Commission will retire a total of $7,332,000 of its bonded indebtedness this year, the commission reported at its meeting here Tuesday.

That will bring to $12,019,000 the amount of revenue bonds since the retirement of the bonds began last year. The commission completed its turnpike financing in 1952 when it issued $326 million in revenue bonds to mature in 1992.

A preliminary budget for 1963 was submitted to the commission Tuesday in which 1963 income was estimated at $26.5 million—about two per cent greater than that expected for 1962. Expenses for 1963 were estimated at $5,471,940.

Future of All Christendom To Be Influenced by Talks

EDITOR'S NOTE—The future of Christendom will be deeply influenced at the decisions which come from the Vatican Council, which begins meetings next week in Rome—the first in 92 years, the 21st since the days of the apostles. Here, in the first of three articles an AP religion news writer who will cover the meetings probes their plans and promise.

By GEORGE CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Pivotal changes apparently are in the making for the Roman Catholic Church.

Just what form they will take, and how far they will go, hinge on the 2nd Vatican Council, opening Oct. 11 in Rome—the largest gathering of ecclesiastical authorities in the Church's 2,000-year history.

Its decisions will affect, directly or indirectly, the whole of Christendom.

The aim is a general renovation in the life and operating structure of the Church. Pope John XXIII's favorite word for it is "aggiornamento"—bringing the Church up to date.

"The coming council will effect a real reform in the Church," says the Most Rev. Lorenz Jaeger archbishop of Paderborn, Germany.

This doesn't imply any changes in basic beliefs, but council planners say it does mean clarification of certain doctrines, as well as a reshaping of many policies and practices.

The council is the first in 92 years for the Church and, as Rome counts it, the 21st such convocation since the time of the apostles.

None of the others has had such thorough preparations—an intensive process that has involved about 700 churchmen in various countries serving on a battery of commissions for the past three years.

The approximately 2,800 "successors of the apostles," cardinals, archbishops and abbots, in conjunction with the Pope, constitute the Church's ruling hierarchy.

About 75 or more delegate-observers will be on hand from other denominations, at Rome's invitation. Although they will not have a vote, they will sit in on general discussion sessions closed to the press.

All told, the council may bring up to 10,000 visiting participants to Rome. It is expected to continue until mid-1963, with recesses for Christmas and Easter.

Keen interest, both among Catholics and members of other churches, has centered on possible steps to foster Christian reunion—a cause strongly espoused by Pope John.

In view of the old, entrenched obstacles, however, there is clearly no intention of attempting reunion now. But many Catholic leaders expect the council to reduce some of the obstacles.

There are about a billion Christians in the world, 550 million of them Roman Catholics.

The council, says Archbishop Karl J. Alter of Cincinnati, will "review every phase of church life—doctrine, liturgy, law, missions, training of the clergy, sacraments, revision of the liturgical books."

Kennedy Signs Bond Bill To Assist U.N.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy signed the U.N. bond bill here Tuesday and gave the first of the dozen pens he used to U.N. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson.

Leaders of the House and Senate, along with members of the Foreign Affairs committee of both houses, attended the ceremony in the President's office.

Kennedy expressed his gratification at enactment of the bill, which authorizes the United States to buy bonds issued by the United Nations to meet the costs of enforcing the peace in the Congo, Middle East and elsewhere.

Under the measure Kennedy may lend the United Nations up to $100 million on 2 per cent, 25-year bonds, but not more than the total purchases of all other U.N. members.

At last count, 17 other nations had bought $27.5 million worth of the proposed $200-million bond issue, and 26 other nations had pledged to purchase $45 million more.

Use of Sabin III Polio Vaccine Held for Children

WASHINGTON (AP)—Dr. Albert B. Sabin of Cincinnati, developer of the oral polio vaccine, attended an 11-hour meeting Tuesday night but failed to sway a previous recommendation that Type III Sabin vaccine be used only for children.

Dr. Sabin staunchly has advocated use of Type III, as well as the generally approved Types I and II, for adults as well as children. But the special advisory committee to Surgeon General Luther L. Terry decided to stick with its Sept. 15 recommendation of Types I and II for all citizens but Type III only for children.

Ohio Turnpike Plans To Pay on Its Debt

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Turnpike Commission will retire a total of $7,332,000 of its bonded indebtedness this year, the commission reported at its meeting here Tuesday.

That will bring to $12,019,000 the amount of revenue bonds since the retirement of the bonds began last year. The commission completed its turnpike financing in 1952 when it issued $326 million in revenue bonds to mature in 1992.

A preliminary budget for 1963 was submitted to the commission Tuesday in which 1963 income was estimated at $26.5 million—about two per cent greater than that expected for 1962. Expenses for 1963 were estimated at $5,471,940.

Forty-three cases were disposed of in Pickaway County Common Pleas Court during September, according to a report today from the Clerk of Courts office.

Locher Wins Cleveland Poll

McElroy Is Bitter In Conceding Defeat

CLEVELAND (AP) — Acting Mayor Ralph S. Locher has won a solid victory in Cleveland's mayor primary, defeating Ohio Atty. Gen. Mark McElroy by 28,389 votes.

Locher won the primary without the backing of the regular Democratic Party organization.

Unofficial returns gave Locher 74,529 to 46,140 for McElroy in Tuesday's Democratic primary. John T. Corrigan, Cuyahoga County prosecutor, was third with 16,593 votes.

Locher will face Republican Willard W. Brown in the November election in this Democratic stronghold.

At stake is the unexpired term of former mayor Anthony J. Celebrezze, who resigned to become secretary of health, education and welfare in President Kennedy's cabinet. The unexpired term runs until the middle of November next year.

There was no Republican primary since Brown was the sole GOP candidate.

McElroy, who was supported by County Democratic Chairman Ray T. Miller, said in a bitterly-worded statement conceding defeat that he would not support Locher in November. He said he had no confidence in Locher's integrity and accused the acting mayor of conducting a "campaign of character assassination."

He declined comment when asked if he would support Brown.

Locher was city law director and stepped up to mayor automatically when Celebrezze resigned. He ran with the blessings of Celebrezze and U.S. Sen. Frank J. Lausche, another former Cleveland mayor.

Farmer Holds To Corn While U.S. Sells It

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government continues to sell surplus corn from its stocks at a time when some farmers are holding grain off markets in an effort to force prices up.

The Agriculture Department reports that sales of corn during the week ended Sept. 21 were 5,226,000 bushels, bringing sales since Oct. 1, 1961, to a record high of 802,183,000 bushels. Sales in the like period a year earlier were only 253,871,000 bushels.

Sales of government corn are made to obtain funds for paying farmers for reducing acreages of corn, sorghum grain and barley.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department has announced the incentive price for shorn wool will be 62 cents a pound during the 1963 marketing year. This price has been in effect since the incentive program began in 1955.

The government makes payments to wool producers in amounts sufficient to bring average returns to 62 cents. In other words, the payment makes up the deficit when market prices average less than 62 cents.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department reports it had $6,657,000,000 invested in farm commodity surpluses on June 30 compared with $7,038,000,000 a year earlier.

Its investment included $2,183,000,000 in price support loans on crops and $4,474,000,000 in crops, dairy products and other commodities owned by it. The latter were acquired under price support operations.

The department reports also its banking agency, the Commodity Credit Corporation, lost $2,636,000,000 during the 1962 fiscal year in carrying out price support, farm payment, export subsidy and related programs. This compared with $1,910,000,000 during the 1961 fiscal year.

Circle of the Evangelical United Brethren Church will meet in the church basement. Members are reminded that this is the last opportunity to order Christmas Candles as all orders must be turned in at the meeting.

Schirra Labeled 'Rah-Rah' By Naval Academy Mates

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — "Rah-rah" is what the boys at Annapolis called Walter M. Schirra Jr. 17 years ago. The name still is appropriate today.

Excerpts from the 1945 Naval Academy yearbook provide an idea of Schirra's character:

"Here is a guy who could make anyone laugh. His never-ending sense of humor, descriptions and ability to execute new pranks have kept us either amused or holding the bag."

Easygoing, unperturbable Wally Schirra is much the same today. He is the most carefree of the original, seven-man astronaut team, always ready with a smile or a fast wisecrack.

Nothing seems to disturb him. He went about the strenuous training for his orbital flight with the ease of preparing for a family picnic. He is happiest when things are fast-paced—when he's at the stick of a jet plane, the wheel of a fast sports car or is skimming the waves on water skis behind a powerful boat.

"We expect one of his women to snag him soon," the Annapolis yearbook continued. "But meanwhile his big brown eyes still have that new-fields-to-conquer look."

Trainmen Shelve Call For Strike against BGO

Wally succumbed to matrimony not long after graduation and has been conquering new worlds ever since, climaxed by his selection as the pilot for the longest U.S. manned orbital flight yet attempted.

The gal who snagged him was Josephine C. Fraser of Seattle, Wash. They have two children, Walter III, 12, and Suzanne, 4. Their home is in Houston, headquarters of the Manned Space Flight Center.

Schirra was born March 12, 1923, in Hackensack, N.J., and grew up in Oradell, N.J. He was somewhat of a hell-raiser in those days.

"Just a normal boy," recalls his mother, who, with Schirra's father, now lives in San Diego, Calif.

She remembers that Wally was "crazy about aircraft." This was natural because he came from a flying family. The elder Schirra was a World War I ace in the Army Air Corps and after the war he and his wife barnstormed through the eastern United States in a light plane, with Wally's mother walking a wing or two in her day.

The family attended the Episcopal Church.

Wally's father wanted him to go to West Point, but he chose Annapolis and naval aviation. He is now a commander.

Schirra was first introduced to real danger in the Korean war, where he flew 90 combat missions in F84E jet aircraft. He downed one enemy MIG fighter and had one probable kill. For his service he earned the Distinguished Flying Cross and two air medals.

However, it was considered rare enough by the curator at the Columbus Zoo for him to add it to the collection there. A member of the zoo staff was to pick up the odd-looking catch today. Locher Wins Cleveland Poll

McElroy Is Bitter In Conceding Defeat

CLEVELAND (AP) — Acting Mayor Ralph S. Locher has won a solid victory in Cleveland's mayor primary, defeating Ohio Atty. Gen. Mark McElroy by 28,389 votes.

Locher won the primary without the backing of the regular Democratic Party organization.

Unofficial returns gave Locher 74,529 to 46,140 for McElroy in Tuesday's Democratic primary. John T. Corrigan, Cuyahoga County prosecutor, was third with 16,593 votes.

Locher will face Republican Willard W. Brown in the November election in this Democratic stronghold.

At stake is the unexpired term of former mayor Anthony J. Celebrezze, who resigned to become secretary of health, education and welfare in President Kennedy's cabinet. The unexpired term runs until the middle of November next year.

There was no Republican primary since Brown was the sole GOP candidate.

McElroy, who was supported by County Democratic Chairman Ray T. Miller, said in a bitterly-worded statement conceding defeat that he would not support Locher in November. He said he had no confidence in Locher's integrity and accused the acting mayor of conducting a "campaign of character assassination."

He declined comment when asked if he would support Brown.

Locher was city law director and stepped up to mayor automatically when Celebrezze resigned. He ran with the blessings of Celebrezze and U.S. Sen. Frank J. Lausche, another former Cleveland mayor.

Farmer Holds To Corn While U.S. Sells It

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government continues to sell surplus corn from its stocks at a time when some farmers are holding grain off markets in an effort to force prices up.

The Agriculture Department reports that sales of corn during the week ended Sept. 21 were 5,226,000 bushels, bringing sales since Oct. 1, 1961, to a record high of 802,183,000 bushels. Sales in the like period a year earlier were only 253,871,000 bushels.

Sales of government corn are made to obtain funds for paying farmers for reducing acreages of corn, sorghum grain and barley.

Schirra Off On 9-Hour Earth Orbit

Schirra reported as he achieved orbit that he was in excellent condition. Mercury Control told him he was at the proper speed and angle for a seven-orbit mission. Although the capsule could go seven orbits, today's flight was planned for only six, primarily because of the setting up of recovery areas in set spots around the world.

If all went right, Schirra would land in the Pacific Ocean 275 miles northeast of Midway Island at the completion of his sixth orbit. Based on the launch time of 7:16 a.m., expected impact time would be 4:27 p.m. (EST).

Schirra's flight was designed to nearly double the time spent in space by Glenn and Carpenter. Its main purpose was to lay the groundwork for the next step in the U.S. man-in-space program. This is an 18 orbit, 24 hour mission scheduled next year.

The 18 orbit flight will use essentially the same spacecraft as the earlier Mercury flights, and Schirra's job was to determine the best means of conserving vital fuel, electrical power and water. The water is pumped through a cooling device to maintain comfortable cabin and space suit temperatures.

To hold down consumption of these valuable ingredients, Schirra was to spend considerable time in drifting flight during the fourth and fifth orbits. In this cruise mode, he shuts off power and control systems, allowing the capsule to move freely on its roll, pitch and yaw axis, rotating slowly.

Several minutes of limited drifting—with minimum control and usage—also were scheduled.

Before blastoff Schirra sat calmly in Sigma 7, atop the big booster, as trouble with the radar equipment at the Canary Island tracking station stopped the countdown. The delay was brief.

Coverage of the launching was open to newsmen from around the world just as were the flights of previous U.S. astronauts, Alan B. Shepard Jr., Virgil I. Grissom, John H. Glenn Jr. and Malcolm Scott Carpenter.

The astronaut's wife, Jo, and children, Walter M. II, 12, and Suzanne, 4, were at their home in Houston, Tex. Schirra's parents Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Schirra Sr. planned to follow events at their San Diego, Calif., home.

In the most severe test yet for an American astronaut, Schirra was to nearly double the time spent in space by Glenn and Carpenter earlier this year.

His main assignment was to qualify the Project Mercury capsule for the next big adventure in the American man-in-space program—an 18-orbit, 24-hour mission scheduled early next year.

How well Schirra conserved fuel, power and coolant water were the major items scheduled for study as he whipped more than 100 miles above the earth on his planned 170,000-mile course.

To limit consumption of these vital ingredients, the astronaut was to spend long periods in so-called drifting flight. In this cruise mode, all power and control systems shut off and the capsule rotates slowly, making about one revolution every 30 minutes.

Whether Schirra could continue to operate normally in drift flight—when he at times is flying head-down—would determine to a great deal how much the Mercury capsule fuel and power supplies have to be modified for the 24-hour test.

Several changes were made in Sigma 7 to further conserve the valuable hydrogen peroxide fuel which is used to fire small jets spotted on the surface of the capsule.

These are used to control the position of the craft with respect to the horizon. They are especially critical when the ship reenters the atmosphere. The bottom of the craft, with its heat shield, must be positioned to fend off the terrific temperature.

Both Glenn and Carpenter had empty tank after they re-entered—meaning they had a dangerously thin supply when they began the critical plunge back to earth.

Officials instructed Schirra to have 35 per cent fuel left in both his automatic and manual control system tanks at the time he starts the re-entry maneuver.

Carpenter at one spell inadvertently had his automatic and manual fuel systems operating simultaneously. A device was added to prevent this happening to Schirra. Another modification was designed to prevent inadvertent firing of high thrust jets when smaller ones will suffice for an attitude correction.

Medical monitors at the 21 tracking stations on earth were to follow Schirra's physical condition through sensors attached to his body and from his personal observations, radioed to the ground. The pilot was to add to the data being compiled on man's ability to operate in the weightlessness of space.

The World Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. James O. Eastland, Democrat and segregationist from Mississippi, plans something much less than a full investigation of the riots at the University of Mississippi.

He has announced the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which he is chairman, will look into "all events" at Ole Miss "since the U.S. marshals and Army troops moved in."

But he already is convinced he knows the cause of the riots. He and Mississippi's Gov. Ross R. Barnett blame them on the Kennedy administration and U.S. marshals.

But a thorough investigation would cover two other questions:

1. Why and how other Southern states have avoided bloodshed by beginning to comply with the Supreme Court order of eight years ago to end segregation in public schools.

2. And what led up to the Ole Miss riots which were an act of defiance against a U.S. court order for James H. Meredith, 29-year-old Negro, to be enrolled at the school.

The original defiance came from Barnett who said, "We shall never surrender" and personally blocked the court order by refusing to let Meredith into the school.

Thus the governor's defiance was an encouragement to the whole state of Mississippi, including the students at Ole Miss, to resist an order of a U.S. court.

The product of this defiance was rioting deaths, many injuries and the spectacle of American race hate which Mississippians dangled before a shocked world. Barnett's performance is incredible from any reasonable standpoint.

He could not help but know—unless he thought he could bluff President Kennedy into doing nothing—that there could only be one result: the President would have to back up the court with force, if necessary.

If Mississippi could defy the government on such a profound social decision as that of the Supreme Court on public school education, then any state at any time could do the same on any other court decision.

The result would not be an American government but an American jungle. Since the people of the nation as a whole organized their government to prevent just such anarchy, then no state could defy the court and get away with it.

The alternative to silent submission to a Supreme Court decision is appeal to all the states through Congress where Southern Democrats, although in a minority, are a powerful force.

But Congress has done nothing to change the court decision on school desegregation since it was handed down in 1954.

Thus the kind of investigation Eastland announced would not touch the main issue at all: why Mississippi took it on itself to defy the government and why it thought it could get away with it, if it did.

Except now for Ole Miss, no school in Mississippi, Alabama or South Carolina has been desegregated after eight years. The entire Alabama congressional delegation gave its support to the Mississippians to proceed with its defiance.

After what happened at Ole Miss, Alabama and South Carolina, by this time, probably have come to the realization they can't defy the court either.

Schirra reported as he achieved orbit that he was in excellent condition. Mercury Control told him he was at the proper speed and angle for a seven-orbit mission. Although the capsule could go seven orbits, today's flight was planned for only six, primarily because of the setting up of recovery areas in set spots around the world.

If all went right, Schirra would land in the Pacific Ocean 275 miles northeast of Midway Island at the completion of his sixth orbit. Based on the launch time of 7:16 a.m., expected impact time would be 4:27 p.m. (EST).

Schirra's flight was designed to nearly double the time spent in space by Glenn and Carpenter. Its main purpose was to lay the groundwork for the next step in the U.S. man-in-space program. This is an 18 orbit, 24 hour mission scheduled next year.

The 18 orbit flight will use essentially the same spacecraft as the earlier Mercury flights, and Schirra's job was to determine the best means of conserving vital fuel, electrical power and water. The water is pumped through a cooling device to maintain comfortable cabin and space suit temperatures.

To hold down consumption of these valuable ingredients, Schirra was to spend considerable time in drifting flight during the fourth and fifth orbits. In this cruise mode, he shuts off power and control systems, allowing the capsule to move freely on its roll, pitch and yaw axis, rotating slowly.

Several minutes of limited drifting—with minimum control and usage—also were scheduled.

Before blastoff Schirra sat calmly in Sigma 7, atop the big booster, as trouble with the radar equipment at the Canary Island tracking station stopped the countdown. The delay was brief.

Coverage of the launching was open to newsmen from around the world just as were the flights of previous U.S. astronauts, Alan B. Shepard Jr., Virgil I. Grissom, John H. Glenn Jr. and Malcolm Scott Carpenter.

The astronaut's wife, Jo, and children, Walter M. II, 12, and Suzanne, 4, were at their home in Houston, Tex. Schirra's parents Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Schirra sr., planned to follow events at their San Diego, Calif., home.

In the most severe test yet for an American astronaut, Schirra was to nearly double the time spent in space by Glenn and Carpenter earlier this year.

His main assignment was to qualify the Project Mercury capsule for the next big adventure in the American man-in-space program—an 18-orbit, 24-hour mission scheduled early next year.

How well Schirra conserved fuel, power and coolant water were the major items scheduled for study as he whirled more than 100 miles above the earth on his planned 170,000-mile course.

To limit consumption of these vital ingredients, the astronaut was to spend long periods in so-called drifting flight. In this cruise mode, all power and control systems shut off and the capsule rotates slowly, making about one revolution every 30 minutes.

Whether Schirra could continue to operate normally in drift flight—when he at times is flying head-down—would determine to a great deal how much the Mercury capsule fuel and power supplies have to be modified for the 24-hour test.

Several changes were made in Sigma 7 to further conserve the valuable hydrogen peroxide fuel which is used to fire small jets spotted on the surface of the capsule.

These are used to control the position of the craft with respect to the horizon. They are especially critical when the ship reenters the atmosphere. The bottom of the craft, with its heat shield, must be positioned to fend off the terrific temperature.

Both Glenn and Carpenter had empty tanks after they reentered—meaning they had a dangerously thin supply when they began the critical plunge back to earth.

Officials instructed Schirra to have 35 per cent fuel left in both his automatic and manual control system tanks at the time he starts the re-entry maneuver.

Carpenter at one spell inadvertently had his automatic and manual fuel systems operating simultaneously. A device was added to prevent this happening to Schirra. Another modification was designed to prevent inadvertent firing of high thrust jets when smaller ones will suffice for an attitude correction.

Medical monitors at the 21 tracking stations on earth were to follow Schirra's physical condition through sensors attached to his body and from his personal observations, radioed to the ground. The pilot was to add to the data being compiled on man's ability to operate in the weightlessness of space.

The World Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. James O. Eastland, Democrat and segregationist from Mississippi, plans something much less than a full investigation of the riots at the University of Mississippi.

He has announced the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which he is chairman, will look into "all events" at Ole Miss "since the U.S. marshals and Army troops moved in."

But he already is convinced he knows the cause of the riots. He and Mississippi's Gov. Ross R. Barnett blame them on the Kennedy administration and U.S. marshals.

But a thorough investigation would cover two other questions:

1. Why and how other Southern states have avoided bloodshed by beginning to comply with the Supreme Court order of eight years ago to end segregation in public schools.

2. And what led up to the Ole Miss riots which were an act of defiance against a U.S. court order for James H. Meredith, 29-year-old Negro, to be enrolled at the school.

The original defiance came from Barnett who said, "We shall never surrender" and personally blocked the court order by refusing to let Meredith into the school.

Thus the governor's defiance was an encouragement to the whole state of Mississippi, including the students at Ole Miss, to resist an order of a U.S. court.

The product of this defiance was rioting deaths, many injuries and the spectacle of American race hate which Mississippians dangled before a shocked world. Barnett's performance is incredible from any reasonable standpoint.

He could not help but know—unless he thought he could bluff President Kennedy into doing nothing—that there could only be one result: the President would have to back up the court with force, if necessary.

If Mississippi could defy the government on such a profound social decision as that of the Supreme Court on public school education, then any state at any time could do the same on any other court decision.

The result would not be an American government but an American jungle. Since the people of the nation as a whole organized their government to prevent just such anarchy, then no state could defy the court and get away with it.

The alternative to silent submission to a Supreme Court decision is appeal to all the states through Congress where Southern Democrats, although in a minority, are a powerful force.

But Congress has done nothing to change the court decision on school desegregation since it was handed down in 1954.

Thus the kind of investigation Eastland announced would not touch the main issue at all: why Mississippi took it on itself to defy the government and why it thought it could get away with it, if it did.

Except now for Ole Miss, no school in Mississippi, Alabama or South Carolina has been desegregated after eight years. The entire Alabama congressional delegation gave its support to the Mississippians to proceed with its defiance.

After what happened at Ole Miss, Alabama and South Carolina, by this time, probably have come to the realization they can't defy the court either.

Americans Expected To Win Academy Awards for 1962

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The Oscar race for 1962 is now taking shape and one thing seems probable: Hollywood's highest honor will be brought back to Hollywood.

Last April the Academy voters, in an outburst of international good-will, tossed golden statues to a pair of foreigners—Sophia Loren and Maximilian Schell.

That feat is not likely to be repeated next spring. As it appears now, the Oscar derby will be dominated by Yankee entries.

The outline of the race can be seen now. The majority of the major entries will hit the Los Angeles theaters just before the year-end deadline.

Most of the December entries haven't been previewed yet, so the forecaster must go on probability of quality. Will "Mutiny on the Bounty" be a class film or purely commercial? If it possesses much artistic value at all, it is likely to be the leading contender among the films.

Another unknown quantity is "Lawrence of Arabia." But judging from past performances of the producer Sam Spiegel ("On the Waterfront," "Bridge on the River Kwai"), the desert epic will also be among the front-runners.

"The Longest Day," which opens this week, may also be among the leaders. So may any of these December releases: "Freud," "Day of Wine and Roses," "Gypsy," "Jumbo," "Taras Bulba," "Two for the Seesaw" and "Long Day's Journey Into Night."

And don't forget some of the releases earlier in the year: "Birdman of Alcatraz," "Counterfeit Traction," "Music Man," "Miracle Worker" and "Sweet Bird of Youth."

The contenders for best starring performance offer one of the hottest—and most American—of races in recent years.

Marlon Brando's work in "Mutiny on the Bounty" is still to be seen, but he is always a top contender when in a good film. Burt Lancaster will no doubt be among the front-runners for "Birdman of Alcatraz," though his recent victory for "Elmer Gantry" may be a drawback.

Two stars have already set a fast pace for the ladies—Anne Bancroft in "The Miracle Worker" and Geraldine Page in "Sweet Bird of Youth."

BATTLE SCHOOL TO FOLLOW RELIGIOUS BELIEF—Suspended from high school in Springfield Township, O., for refusing to wear shorts in gym class because of their religious belief, freshman Judy Rae Bushong, 16, discusses the situation with her father, Herbert. Meredith Sees Enrollment As 'Victory for America'

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — James H. Meredith, sitting on an iron cot in a bare dormitory room, said Tuesday he considers his enrollment in the University of Mississippi to be "more for America than it is for me."

Meredith is the first Negro knowingly to be admitted as a student in the university's 114-year history.

In an interview, he showed no visible signs of nervousness or apprehension after the explosive riot that swept the university campus after his arrival Sunday night.

Meredith said quietly: "I hope now the situation gets back to normal as soon as possible so that the students can continue their studies normally. That's what I want more than anything else now."

This was his second day to attend classes. He was escorted by Federal Marshal James McShane to the school at 8 a.m., where he attended an hour's class in American Colonial history.

His second class was in political science.

He took a seat toward the back of the room. Two other male students sat a little further back.

None of the seats directly adjoining him was occupied.

There were women students in the class of about 30.

A crowd, estimated by McShane at around 40, had gathered in front of the building when Meredith emerged.

However, Meredith said in the interview that in the classes a number of students have greeted him, saying "Hello" or "Good morning."

He added: "I haven't seen any students in class who appeared to be unfriendly."

In reply to a question as to what he may do after he has received his degree, Meredith said:

"What I do when I finish school depends a lot on the outcome of this situation."

"It is a fact that Negroes are not looked up to and are treated as something other than first-class citizens in Mississippi."

"They are being denied many of the rights that are basic to American democracy."

"I am most concerned with this problem and absolutely intend on seeing that every citizen has an opportunity to be a citizen."

Meredith paid high tribute to his professors at Mississippi. Pointing out that he has attended only a few classes, Meredith said of the faculty:

"The instructors appear to be a much more professional group than any school I've ever been in before."

Plastic Pipe Case Delayed by Court

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The federal anti-trust case involving 15 plastic pipe manufacturing firms and 12 executives has been continued in U.S. District Court by agreement of the defendants and the U.S. Department of Justice. Arraignments had been scheduled for today.

No specific date has been set for the arraignment of firms and executives, charged with conspiring to fix, stabilize and maintain uniform prices, terms and conditions for sale of plastic pipe.

The firms named in the charges by a federal grand jury include the U.S. Rubber Co., B. F. Goodrich Co., U.S. Steel Corp., Republic Steel Corp. and Consolidated Pipe Co. of America.

Sickroom Flowers — Hay Fever

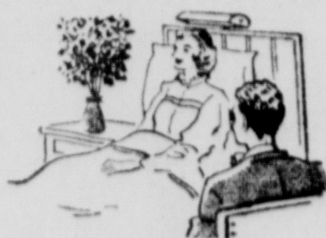

Q. Many patients and quite a few nurses (including the writer) notice that cut flowers in the room cause nasal stuffiness. Some of our staff physicians say this isn't possible. Is it?

A. Many cut flowers belong to the ragweed family but they are insect-pollinated and do not ordinarily cause hay fever. It's possible, we suppose, for enough pollen to be shaken from the flowers in handling to cause symptoms. Psychologic suggestion probably plays a role in many cases.

Q. How did "hay fever" get its name? There's no hay involved in my case — just grass.

A. The disorder known as "hay fever" was recognized and named by non-medical persons long before doctors were aware that the condition existed. People attributed the affliction to exposure to new-mown hay, and consequently called it "Hay Asthma" or "Hay Fever." Nowadays the term "hay fever" is commonly used to describe allergy to ragweed or related pollens.

Send questions to P. O. Box 1174, Louisville 1, Kentucky.

Pinch Test Again

Q. Instead of saying that I am fat, my husband refers to me as being "obese." Just when is a person "fat" or "obese"? (I hate both words!)

A. In common medical usage, an obese person is one whose weight is 20 per cent above normal. The problem is in deciding just what "normal" is. The skeletal frame must be considered, but this introduces more problems. Let's settle for this. Pinch the chest skin and underlying tissue about midway down from the armpit, using the thumb and forefinger. If the "pinch" is thicker than one inch, consider yourself fat or obese (pardon — overweight).

LE Braves Set For Piketon Tilt

Logan Elm continues Scioto Valley Conference play Friday in a home game with Piketon in what is considered the most important league tilt on tap, according to Coach Keith Merrin.

The Braves have a 2-0 conference slate, tops in the loop, while Piketon's Redstreaks battled to a 20-20 tie with Paint Valley in the lone league contest to date.

Laurelville has lost one game. Paint Valley has one defeat and a tie on their record.

Logan Elm has turned in decisive victories over Paint Valley (30-8) and Laurelville (36-0) while Piketon had to stage a come from behind last quarter battle Friday to tie the Bearcats.

REDSTREAK quarterback Ed Ritchie hit halfback Harry Rittenour with a 70-yard pass to knot the score. Paint Valley played much of the final half without varsity quarterback Denver Countryman. The second string quarterback didn't dress and third team man Mike Boatman was also injured.

For the season the Piketon crew has three losses and one tie. Last year they dropped nine straight.

The Pike County Gridders are coached by Ron Jones a graduate of Otterbein College. He is in his second year as head mentor there.

They have three returning lettermen in the backfield, Kenny Trusty, Keith Wilson and Ed Ritchie, all seniors.

The ends are junior lettermen, Harry Rittenour and Larry Hall, and the Redstreaks have good size at tackles with seniors Ed Hara, 185-pounds, and Elgin Mustard 190 pounds, holding down the top spots. Dean Smith, a fullback last year, has been converted to center.

The Logan Elm Braves, with plenty of experience in practically all positions have improved with each game.

THEIR well balanced backfield of Terry Anderson, Jim Martindale and Gary Hardman at half-backs, Arnie Gabriel at fullback and Jeff Lutz at quarterback has been impressive in wins following the opening loss to The Plains of Mt. Sterling.

Since the first game the varsity defensive unit has been nearly impenetrable. The lone touchdown LE opponents have scored in the last three games came late in the tilt at Paint Valley after Coach Keith Merrin pulled his varsity and second string players to give them a well deserved rest.

AP Guesspert Picks OSU To Defeat UCLA

Alabama, Penn State, Texas Also Given Nod For Wins Saturday

By HAROLD CLAASSEN
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—The batting average in pigskin picking here last week was almost as bad as that of the Los Angeles Dodgers in trying to save the National League pennant. The Dodgers went 35 innings without a run. The average here was 43 right and 9 wrong for 827.

This week's winners:
Ohio State over UCLA: This game pits two great backs, Paul Warfield of Ohio State and Kermit Alexander of UCLA, against each other but look at the size of Warfield's playmates!!!

Alabama over Vanderbilt: A year ago 'Bama smothered Vanderbilt 35-6. It should be about the same this time around.

Texas over Tulane: Is there a better fullback in the country than Texas' Ray Poage?

Penn State over Rice: The Texas Owls are weak at tackle and you can't be weak anywhere and expect to derail Penn State's powerhouse.

Georgia Tech over Louisiana State: Billy Lothridge and the home field give Tech a slight edge.

Mississippi over Houston: Ole Miss has had its problems this week but they were not permitted to interfere with the footballers.

Miami over Florida State: State has a horde of returning lettermen and ambitions to go big-time but Miami has George Mira and that is a big difference.

BEAUTIES AND THE BEAST — These five young misses and their mascot head up the Circleville High School cheering section at the Tigers grid tilts. Tiger Pep Rally Slated at Field

The Circleville High School cheerleaders, that group of hard working young ladies who exhort Tiger fans to give full vocal support to the team, have scheduled a pep rally for 7 p. m. tomorrow at the CHS football field immediately following the freshman game there.

The Rally has been planned to build the spirit for the game with Washington C. H. Friday, a gridiron battle that is shaping up as one of the key early season league tilts.

The theme for the rally is "We want to win over Washington". The cheerleaders should have little trouble building team spirit for the traditional rivalry tilt.

The Blue Lions, always traditional Tiger foes, shared the South Central League crown with Circleville in 1961.

FOLLOWERS of the grid sport in Circleville always turn out in full force to view this annual contest. With the importance of the Friday contest, the crowd following should be far above average.

Thus far Tiger fans have outnumbered the followers of the opposition, although three of the first four games have been away from home.

Co-captains Tom Bivens and Dave Hannahs will give short pep talks at the rally, as will the coaches.

The pep band will be there to lend an assist to the cheerleaders as they lead the cheers.

Present plans call for the rally to end with a snake dance on the field.

Nicklaus' Role Is Strange in Pro-Am Joust
CINCINNATI (AP)—Jack Nicklaus of Columbus, the U.S. Open and World Series of Golf champion, will be in the strange position and not a defending champion this weekend in the third annual $10,000 Cincinnati Pro-Amateur Invitational Golf Tournament.

In the two previous tournaments, Nicklaus, as an amateur, paired with his Ohio State golf coach, Bob Kepler, to win the 36-hole best ball event.

Now he has turned pro and, starting Saturday, he will be competing as the pro member of a team. His partner is scheduled to be Pandel Savic of Columbus.

It will be a star-studded field for the tournament which will pay $2,000 to the winning pro. His partner will get a lot of silverware. The tourney will be 18 holes Saturday and the final 18 holes Sunday.

In addition to Nicklaus, such top pros as Dow Finsterwald, Chick Harbert, Bobby Nichols, Art Wall, Ed Furgol, Walter Burkemo, Tommy Bolt, Joe Campbell and Mike Krak will be on hand.

Finsterwald, of Athens, will have Bobby Littler Jr., also of Athens, as his partner. Littler got to the finals of this year's Ohio Amateur and went further than any other Ohioan in the recent National Amateur.

Harvard is playing its 90th football season.

LE Braves Set For Piketon Tilt

Logan Elm continues Scioto Valley Conference play Friday in a home game with Piketon in what is considered the most important league tilt on tap, according to Coach Keith Merrin.

The Braves have a 2-0 conference slate, tops in the loop, while Piketon's Redstreaks battled to a 20-20 tie with Paint Valley in the lone league contest to date.

Laurelville has lost one game. Paint Valley has one defeat and a tie on their record.

Logan Elm has turned in decisive victories over Paint Valley (30-8) and Laurelville (36-0) while Piketon had to stage a come from behind last quarter battle Friday

Teays Valley, Cedarville Meet Friday

Greene County Unit Rated Tops by Viking Coach Marion Waites

Teays Valley travels to Cedarville Friday to engage in what could be a make or break game for the Vikings in the Darby Valley League.

Marion Waites' defensive stalwarts last week shut out Madison South, 14-0, previously touted as one of the top teams in the league.

The game Friday will be another tough one for Pickaway County's newly consolidated class AA high school.

The Cedarville crew is sporting a perfect record, trouncing Green- on 36-8, in the first game of the season, edging Miami Trace 8-6 in the second, beating Jonathan Alder 14-0 in their initial DVL tilt and winning last week in a 58-0 rout of Greenville.

WAITES, said there is no question that the team from Greene County is one of the strongest in the league.

Waites said physically they aren't as large as the Madison South aggregate, but they are a much more explosive type of ball club.

Cedarville uses a pro type offense with both ends split wide and one back in the flats about 80 per cent of the time.

The opponents are capable of scoring from anyplace on the field and their quarterback is a better than average passer.

The TV scouting report shows that Cedarville's 195 pound fullback has good speed and can generate plenty of power on runs up the middle. The left halfback is rated a real shifty runner and the big producer on offense.

Defensively they go into either a 3-4 or six-man line.

THE VIKING mentor said his Pickaway Countians would have to sharpen their pass defense and stop the fullback if they expect to contain their opponents' offense.

He noted that TV defensive members are beginning to take a great deal of pride in their play. They have limited opponents to less than 100 yards total offense per game so far this year.

"If we keep from making mistakes on offense we will be able to score," Waites said.

He admitted that his gridders were hampered by a lack of speed in the backfield, but added that the backs like to hit hard.

Films of the games show that the offensive blocking is improving with each game. He praised his stalwarts as being willing to work hard, and would continue to improve throughout the season.

The Teays Valley marching band will make the trip with the team. It will be the first appearance of the band in uniform.

to tie the Bearcats.

REDSTREAK quarterback Ed Ritchie hit halfback Harry Rittenour with a 70-yard pass to knot the score. Paint Valley played much of the final half without varsity quarterback Denver Countryman. The second string quarterback didn't dress and third team man Mike Boatman was also injured.

For the season the Piketon crew has three losses and one tie. Last year they dropped nine straight.

The Pike County Gridders are coached by Ron Jones a graduate of Otterbein College. He is in his second year as head mentor there.

They have three returning lettermen in the backfield, Kenny Trusty, Keith Wilson and Ed Ritchie, all seniors.

The ends are junior lettermen, Harry Rittenour and Larry Hall, and the Redstreaks have good size at tackles with seniors Ed Hara, 185-pounds, and Elgin Mustard 190 pounds, holding down the top spots. Dean Smith, a fullback last year, has been converted to center.

The Logan Elm Braves, with plenty of experience in practically all positions have improved with each game.

THEIR well balanced backfield of Terry Anderson, Jim Martindale and Gary Hardman at halfbacks, Arnie Gabriel at fullback and Jeff Lutz at quarterback has been impressive in wins following the opening loss to The Plains of Mt. Sterling.

Since the first game the varsity defensive unit has been nearly impenetrable. The lone touchdown LE opponents have scored in the last three games came late in the tilt at Paint Valley after Coach Keith Merrin pulled his varsity and second string players to give them a well deserved rest.

AP Guesspert Picks OSU To Defeat UCLA

Alabama, Penn State, Texas Also Given Nod For Wins Saturday

By HAROLD CLAASSEN Associated Press Sports Writer NEW YORK (AP)—The batting average in pigskin picking here last week was almost as bad as that of the Los Angeles Dodgers in trying to save the National League pennant. The Dodgers went 35 innings without a run. The average here was 43 right and 9 wrong for .827.

This week's winners: Ohio State over UCLA: This game pits two great backs, Paul Warfield of Ohio State and Kermit Alexander of UCLA, against each other but look at the size of Warfield's playmates!!!

Alabama over Vanderbilt: A year ago 'Bama smothered Vanderbilt 35-6. It should be about the same this time around.

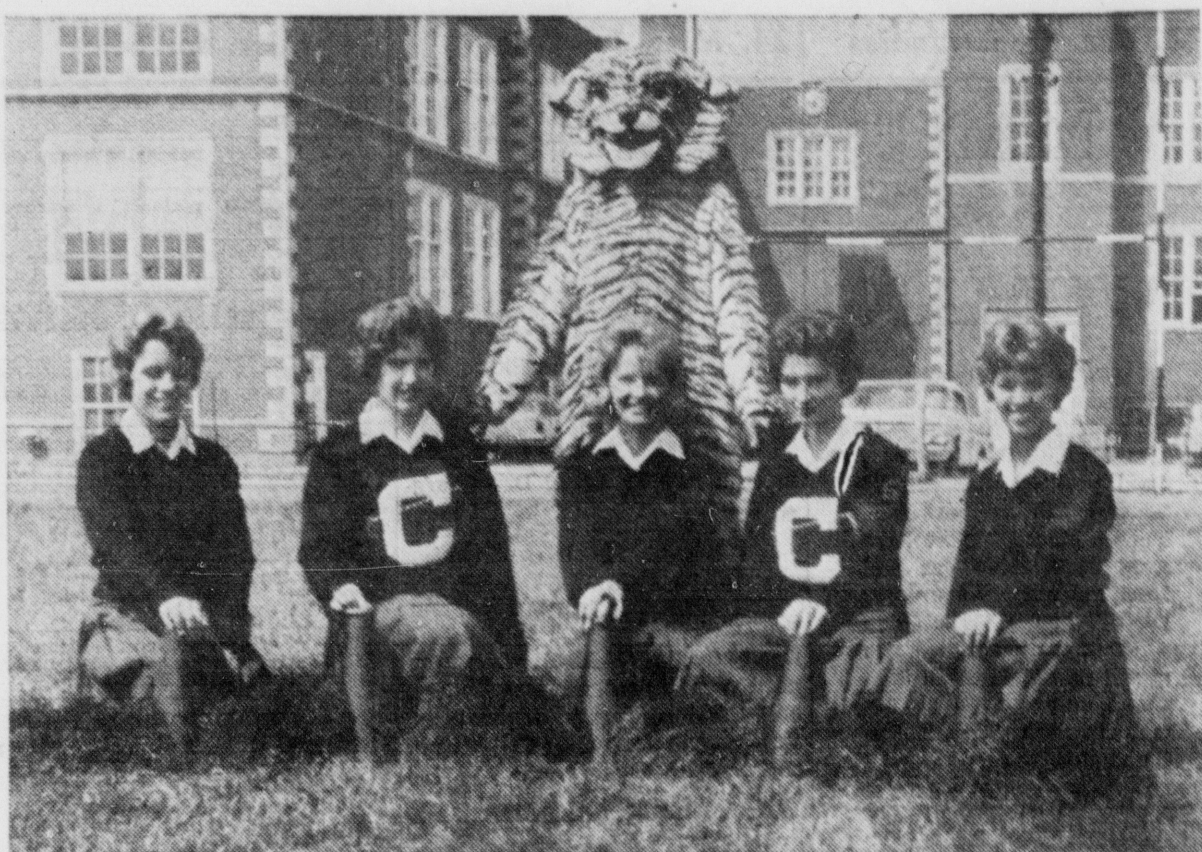

Texas over Tulane: Is there a better fullback in the country than Texas' Ray Poage?

Penn State over Rice: The Texas Owls are weak at tackle and you can't be weak anywhere and expect to derail Penn State's powerhouse.

Georgia Tech over Louisiana State: Billy Lothridge and the home field give Tech a slight edge.

Mississippi over Houston: Ole Miss has had its problems this week but they were not permitted to interfere with the footballers.

Miami over Florida State: State has a horde of returning lettermen and ambitions to go big-time but Miami has George Mira and that is a big difference.

Tiger Pep Rally Slated at Field

The Circleville High School cheerleaders, that group of hard working young ladies who exhort Tiger fans to give full vocal support to the team, have scheduled a pep rally for 7 p. m. tomorrow at the CHS football field immediately following the freshman game there.

The Rally has been planned to build the spirit for the game with Washington C. H. Friday, a gridiron battle that is shaping up as one of the key early season league tilts.

The theme for the rally is "We want to win over Washington". The Cheerleaders should have little trouble building team spirit for the traditional rivalry tilt.

Nicklaus' Role Is Strange in Pro-Am Joust

CINCINNATI (AP)—Jack Nicklaus of Columbus, the U.S. Open and World Series of Golf champion, will be in the strange position and not a defending champion this weekend in the third annual $10,000 Cincinnati Pro Amateur Invitational Golf Tournament.

In the two previous tournaments, Nicklaus, as an amateur, paired with his Ohio State golf coach, Bob Kepler, to win the 36-hole best ball event.

Now he has turned pro and, starting Saturday, he will be competing as the pro member of a team. His partner is scheduled to be Pandel Savic of Columbus.

It will be a star-studded field for the tournament which will pay $2,000 to the winning pro. His partner will get a lot of silverware. The tourney will be 18 holes Saturday and the final 18 holes Sunday.

In addition to Nicklaus, such top pros as Dow Finsterwald, Chick Harbert, Bobby Nichols, Art Wall, Ed Furgol, Walter Burkemo, Tommy Bolt, Joe Campbell and Mike Krak will be on hand.

Finsterwald, of Athens, will have Bobby Littler Jr., also of Athens, as his partner. Littler got to the finals of this year's Ohio Amateur and went further than any other Ohioan in the recent National Amateur.

Harvard is playing its 90th football season.

Liston Is Tagged For 'Ring' Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Sonny Liston's first round knockout of Floyd Patterson earned the new heavyweight champion the "Fighter Of The Month" award from Ring Magazine today.

Patterson was made the No. 1 contender, Liston's former position. Ranked behind Patterson in order were Eddie Machen, of Portland, Ore.; Zora Folley, Chandler, Ariz.; Ingemar Johanson of Sweden; Archie Moore of San Diego, Calif.; Cleveland Williams of Houston, Tex.; Cassius Clay of Louisville, Ky.; Henry Cooper of England; Bob Cleroux of Montreal and Mike De John of Syracuse, N.Y.

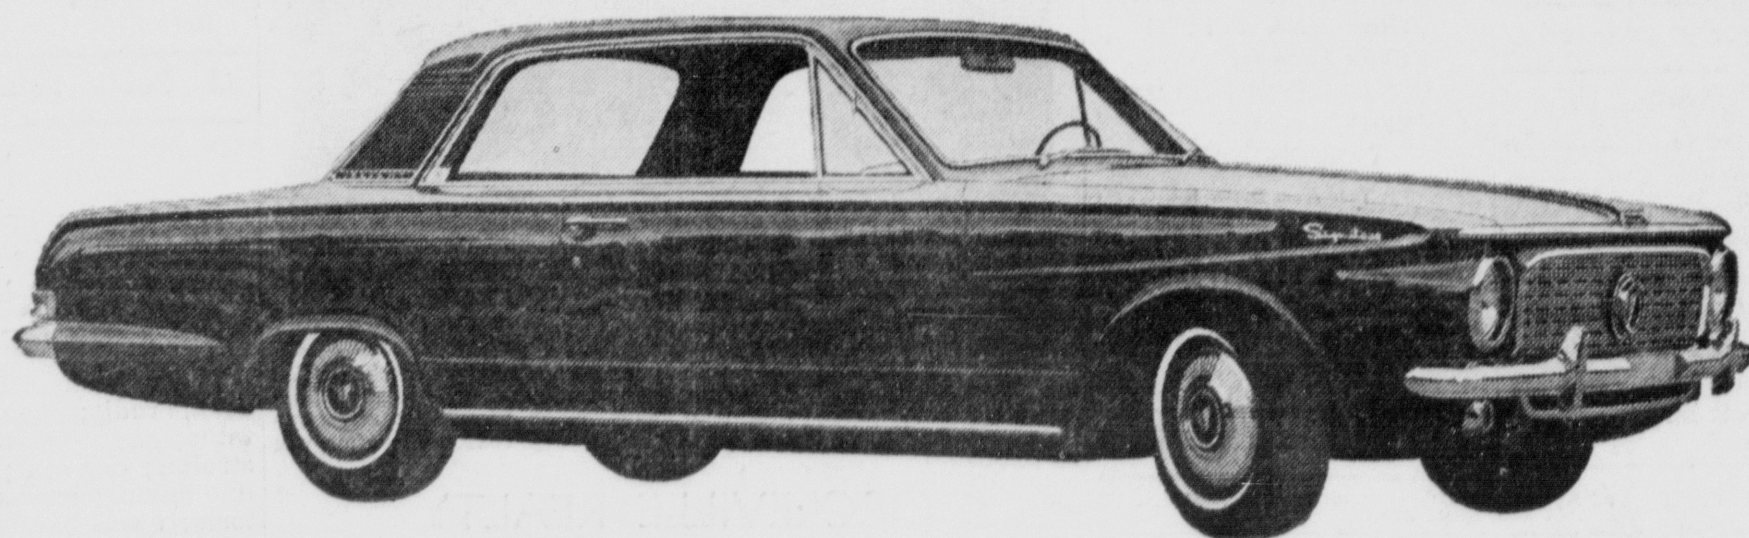

Co-captains Tom Bivens and Dave Hannahs will give short pep talks at the rally, as will the coaches.

The pep band will be there to lend an assist to the cheerleaders as they lead the cheers. Present plans call for the rally to end with a snake dance on the field.

Today's Game Is Decisive
In Dodger-Giant Playoff

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The New York Yankees were waiting in the wings today to see whom they would play in the World Series opening Thursday as the San Francisco Giants and Los Angeles Dodgers met in the decisive playoff game for the National League pennant.

Hanging on the ropes after suffering an 8-0 beating in the first game Monday, the Dodgers rallied from a 5-0 deficit Tuesday and squared the best-of-three series with a dramatic 8-7 triumph. Although they used eight pitchers in a losing effort, the Giants had one of their aces, Juan Marichal (18-11), ready for today's game. The Dodgers, burdened by an overworked pitching staff, called upon Johnny Podres (15-13) who lost Sunday's final game of the regular schedule, 1-0, to St. Louis.

The right-handed Marichal has beaten the Dodgers three times in four decisions this year. Podres has beaten the Giants only once in four outings this year, but one of those was a 3-1 victory over Marichal.

Dodger manager Walter Alston feels his club is on the move after snapping a string of 35 consecutive scoreless innings and a five-game losing streak. Blanked by Jack Sanford on two hits through five innings, the Dodgers crashed through for seven runs in the sixth inning, when Giant manager Alvin Dark was forced to call upon four pitchers.

Sanford, battling a heavy cold, was removed after walking lead-off batter Jim Gilliam on a 3-2 pitch. He had to run hard in the top of the inning, sliding into second base and then scoring on a single.

The Dodgers did most of their damage while right-hander Stu Miller and left-hander Billy O'Dell were on the mound. The big hit was a three-run triple by pinch-hitter Lee Walls off O'Dell.

The Dodgers scored the winning run in the ninth, breaking a 7-7 tie. Bob Bolin, the fifth Giant pitcher, walked leadoff batter Maury Wills. Dark brought in left-hander Dick Lemay and he walked Jim Gilliam, after throwing to first base eight times trying to keep Wills from stealing.

Dark then called for Gaylord Perry, a rookie right-hander, to face pinch-hitter Daryl Spencer. Perry fielded the ex-Giant's bunt back to the mound and had an easy force play on Wills at third. Instead, he threw to first, while the runners advanced.

Mike McCormick, a left-hander, took over and walked Tommy Davis intentionally. Ron Fairly, who had only two hits in his last 32 times at bat, then hit a sacrifice fly to Willie Mays in shallow center. Mays' hurried throw was to the left of the plate, on the third base side, and the flashing Wills slid past catcher Johnny Orsino.

Stan Williams, the fifth Dodger pitcher, was credited with the victory. He quelled a Giant uprising in the eighth and retired the side in the ninth, striking out the last two.

A major league record for a nine-inning game was set when the teams struggled through 4 hours and 18 minutes. A total of 42 players were used. The Giants' eight pitchers equaled a National League record.

Today's Game Is Decisive In Dodger-Giant Playoff

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The New York Yankees were waiting in the wings today to see whom they would play in the World Series opening Thursday as the San Francisco Giants and Los Angeles Dodgers met in the decisive playoff game for the National League pennant.

Hanging on the ropes after suffering an 8-0 beating in the first game Monday, the Dodgers rallied from a 5-0 deficit Tuesday and squared the best-of-three series with a dramatic 8-7 triumph.

Although they used eight pitchers in a losing effort, the Giants had one of their aces, Juan Marichal (18-11), ready for today's game. The Dodgers, burdened by an overworked pitching staff, called upon Johnny Podres (15-13) who lost Sunday's final game of the regular schedule, 10, to St. Louis.

The right-handed Marichal has beaten the Dodgers three times in four decisions this year. Podres has beaten the Giants only once in four outings this year, but one of those was a 3-1 victory over Marichal.

Dodger manager Walter Alston feels his club is on the move after snapping a string of 35 consecutive scoreless innings and a five-game losing streak. Blanked by Jack Sanford on two hits through five innings, the Dodgers crashed through for seven runs in the sixth inning, when giant manager Alvin Dark was forced to call upon four pitchers.

Sanford, battling a heavy cold, was removed after walking lead-off batter Jim Gilliam on a 3-2 pitch. He had to run hard in the top of the inning, sliding into second base and then scoring on a single.

The Dodgers did most of their damage while right-hander Stu Miller and left-hander Billy O'Dell were on the mound. The big hit was a three-run triple by pinch-hitter Lee Walls off O'Dell.

The Dodgers scored the winning run in the ninth, breaking a 7-7 tie. Bob Bolin, the fifth Giant pitcher, walked leadoff batter Maury Wills. Dark brought in left-hander Dick Lemay and he walked Jim Gilliam, after throwing to first base eight times trying to keep Wills from stealing.

Dark then called for Gaylord Perry, a rookie right-hander, to face pinch-hitter Daryl Spencer. Perry fielded the ex-Giant's bunt back to the mound and had an easy force play on Wills at third. Instead, he threw to first, while the runners advanced.

Mike McCormick, a left-hander, took over and walked Tommy Davis intentionally. Ron Fairly, who had only two hits in his last 32 times at bat, then hit a sacrifice fly to Willie Mays in shallow center. Mays' hurried throw was to the left of the plate, on the third base side, and the flashing Wills slid past catcher Johnny Orsino.

Stan Williams, the fifth Dodger pitcher, was credited with the victory. He quelled a Giant uprising in the eighth and retired the side in the ninth, striking out the last two.

A major league record for a nine-inning game was set when the teams struggled through 4 hours and 18 minutes. A total of 42 players were used. The Giants' eight pitchers equaled a National League record.

NBC's "Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson as its new pilot, took off smoothly this week. Johnny was agreeable, exhibited occasional flashes of gentle wit and seemed poised and sure of himself.

It is unfair to review a program of this type—largely spontaneous and depending heavily on the entertainment value of its guest stars, until it has had a few test flights.

This viewer's initial reaction was that the show was so smooth and bland, the conversation so polite—and the commercials so all-encompassing—that the program was hardly worth the sacrifice of a couple of hours of sleep. But again, Carson must have a chance to get rolling.

Northwestern Leads Nation In Grid Data

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The strong passing arm of quarterback Tom Myers has carried Northwestern into the No. 1 ball-moving spot among the nation's major colleges.

In the first team statistics, released today by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau, the Wildcats from Evanston, Ill., are credited with 519 yards. All of it was picked up in the opening game against South Carolina.

Myers personally accounted for 275 yards on passes. He completed 20 of 24 throws, 15 in a row, for one of the most dazzling aerial exhibitions in years.

According to the NCAB, which keeps tab on such details, no player ever threw so many passes with so few misses in a single game.

Behind Northwestern in the total offense standings comes Wisconsin, with a 491-yard average. Then follow Arkansas, 454; West Texas State and Utah State, 429 each.

While Northwestern is setting the pace in the overall offense and passing departments, West Texas State is showing the way on the ground, averaging 343 yards per game in three games.

Special Phone Prepared for Schirra's Use

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) —A sort of extension telephone designed for mid-ocean raft lounging is part of astronaut Walter M. Schirra Jr.'s equipment for his scheduled six-orbit flight.

The idea is to let people know where he is—and how he feels—at journey's end.

The telephone is essentially a tiny, highly refined version of the headsets worn by switchboard operators. It has a 30-foot cord, one end of which can be carried by the astronaut from the space capsule to the life raft.

The addition of the telephone to the spacecraft equipment was predicated upon the assumption that Schirra would much prefer a sunbath aboard the life raft to remaining inside the capsule cabin after landing.

This assumption was understandable since one capsule sank only minutes after impact in July 1961. This was the one Virgil I. Grissom rode on a 15-minute sub-orbital flight.

In the unlikely event that the capsule should sink or the transmitters fail, Schirra has a walkie-talkie radio in the survival kit aboard the raft.

Toledo Police Curb School Racial Fuss

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Police standing guard at Libbey High School Tuesday encountered a demonstration apparently ignited by a message scrawled on a sidewalk in front of the school. The sign warned Negroes to stay away.

About 100 Negro students blocked a main floor hallway. White students made no attempt to pass through the barricade. School officials and police quickly herded students into their classrooms without further incident.

Roughly, three out of every ten students at the school are Negroes.

Fearing a possible racial disturbance, three uniformed police crews and several plainclothes officers had turned up when school opened. The sidewalk message appeared Monday.

Aided by officers cruising the area in unmarked cars, police dispersed groups that congregated in front of the school.

Loy W. Rusie, Libbey principal, said the presence of police may have added to the tension. He said he thought most students had calmed down about the sidewalk writing incident and termed the disagreement nothing serious.

Five Ordinances Are Approved at Regular Council Session

City Council last night breezed through a rapid session which saw affirmative legislation taken on five ordinances.

Heading the list was a measure authorizing a contract with Burgess & Niple, Columbus engineering firm which has provided services to the city in the past. The ordinance was passed on a suspension of rules vote after the solons approved a motion for minor changes.

The enacted ordinance revoked a previous one which had been held to second reading due to several changes in wording desired by the Council. Burgess & Niple was represented last night by Frank Baum.

Next on the agenda was an ordinance authorizing the service director to proceed with construction of curbs and gutters on Fairview Ave. This measure applies to property owners who have not already erected the facilities in compliance with a resolution adopted on Aug. 7, 1962.

TERMS of the ordinance will allow the service director to enter into a contract with a private firm. Cost of the construction shall not exceed $842.

The cost shall be borne by the property owners who have not previously constructed the curbs and gutters, with the appropriate amounts being placed on the individual tax duplicates.

K of C Unit Holds Session

Members of Hannan Council No. 5297, Knights of Columbus, met Monday evening for their regular meeting in the council rooms at Franklin and Pickaway Sts.

It was reported that 11 members and their wives attended a card party and social in the council rooms Saturday evening. Door prize was awarded to Mrs. Paul Schillinger. Gaylord Dean won a transistor radio.

Guests speaker for Monday's meeting was Fiske O'Hara who spoke on the sponsoring of a Boy Scout group.

Coming events for October were announced which include the need for blood donors at the Bloodmobile visit October 11; showing of the film, "These Men Called Knights", October 15; first degree for new members October 21; and a Halloween Party for Knights and their wives October 27.

MEMBERS were asked to listen to an address by Luke Hart, supreme knight, slated for 1:10 p. m. via a Washington C. H. radio station.

Guests for the evening included George Flynn, district deputy, and Bernard Glockner, district warden, both of Portsmouth Council No. 741; and Paul Schillinger from the Chillicothe council.

The ordinance in turn repeals an ordinance of Sept. 18 calling for construction of curbs and gutters at Fairview.

Two more measures authorized the Board of Public Utilities to advertise for bids — one for furnishing necessary labor for extending water mains to the Merle Turner Subdivision and the other for the purchase of a bucket type sewer cleaning machine.

The final measure was an ordinance appropriating a total of $265 to the salary and stationery accounts of Circleville Municipal Court. One section authorized $40 to the salary account and the other $225 for stationery and supplies.
